TROOPS RUSH TO MICHIGAN FIGHT CENTRE

Strikers Reinforcing Flint City Pickets

CRISIS RAPIDLY GROWS WORSE, SAYS GOVERNOR

Flint, Mich., Jan. 12. Governor Frank Murphy, just elected to office, has ordered a regiment of the National Guard of Michigan State to proceed immediately to this tense industrial centre to prevent a repetition of last night's fighting between police and strike-pickets, in which 23 were injured.

Sit-down strikers, in possession of the Fisher Motor Body factory still, started the trouble when they rushed the company guards in order to prevent them interfering with relatives and friends who were bringing them food. Police threw tear gas bombs, pickets jumped into the fight and presently police were firing into the crowd.

The pickets are now being reinforced by strikers from other towns and work in the Pontiac motor factory, where workers refused to strike, has also been suspended. There are now no General Motors assembly lines which are not affected by the strikes.

It is estimated that 170,000 are idle throughout the nation owing to the motor and maritime walk-outs.—Reuter.

Situation Worse

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 12. Governor Frank Murphy considers the position in Flint as very grave. Hourly telephone reports indicate the Flint situation is rapidly growing worse," he says.

He has ordered 1,500 men of the 12th Infantry Regiment to proceed to Flint from the Armories of nine other cities where they have been mobilised "for strike duty." Only a few hours ago they were called to their depots for emergency operations, when Toledo, Ohio, reported 1,800 C.I.O. members converging on Flint to support the strikers.—United Press.

BRITAIN'S NEW TIES IN EGYPT

SIR MILES LAMPSON AS AMBASSADOR ARMY OFFICERS WILL LEAVE

Cairo, Jan. 12. Egypt's new status was marked to-day by the ceremonious presentation of his credentials, as the first British Ambassador, by Sir Miles Lampson, formerly High Commissioner.

Sir Miles was driven to the Abdin Palace in the State coach used by the King on State occasions, accompanied by the Court Chamberlain and escorted by the royal bodyguard and other members of the Embassy staff.

Under the new regime fifteen British officers are retiring from the Air Force, but others may be engaged on different contracts.

All the British Army officers will resign, thus severing sixty-five years of British connection with Egypt. A new British Military Mission, however, is arriving shortly.—Reuter Special.

M. P. RESIGNING

London, Jan. 12. Sir William Ray, Conservative member of Parliament for Richmond, Surrey, since 1932, has resigned on account of ill-health. A by-election will follow within a few weeks. At the last election, Sir William's majority was 19,480—British Wireless.

Bitter Cold Sweeps West Of America

Denver, Jan. 12. A bitter cold wave is sweeping the west and south-west of America to-day.

Temperatures range between 15 and 20 degrees below zero in some parts, causing at least 20 deaths.

Damage to the California citrus crop from frost is estimated at $10,000,000.—Reuter.

FINNISH VESSEL WRECKED

MANY FEARED LOST IN LIFEBOATS

EIGHT SWIM ASHORE

Glasgow, Jan. 12. The new Finnish motor-ship, Joanna Thorden, went ashore in Pentland Firth, between Scotland and the Orkney Islands, to-day. The crew took to their boats, one of which landed, empty, on the Orkneys. Another boat, with over twenty persons aboard, including some women, is missing and feared lost with all on board.

The vessel, after striking a reef, broke in two. The Captain first sent off twenty-two men, two women and two children. In one of the ship's life-boats, whilst he and the remainder of the crew left later in a smaller boat, the ship was sinking.

The latter boat was washed ashore, empty, but eight of the men aboard succeeded in swimming ashore. The remainder, as well as the entire company in the other life-boat, are missing.

Four bodies have so far been washed ashore.

At the time of the disaster, the Joanna Thorden was completing her return maiden voyage from New York to Helsingfors.—Reuter Special.

LONDON PRESS DINNER

London, Jan. 12. The Foreign Secretary is attending the dinner of the Foreign Press Association in London to-night—British Wireless.

EDEN PLEADS FOR RECONCILIATION

"PREFER BUTTER TO GUNS"
BRITAIN OFFERS EVERY HELP TO SETTLE EUROPE

London, Jan. 12.

A plea for international co-operation was made by the British Foreign Secretary, Mr. Anthony Eden, when speaking at a dinner of the Foreign Press Association here to-night.

He said the British Government warmly reciprocated the sentiments expressed by Herr Adolf Hitler, German Chancellor, in his statement to the diplomatic corps the day previous urging real understanding and reconciliation among nations.

That is the task, said Mr. Eden, to which we must devote ourselves during the coming year. And so far as the people of Britain are concerned, he assured his hearers, it was a task to which they would bend their most earnest and most united endeavours.

Referring to re-armament, Mr. Eden said that Britain, if necessary, would show as stubborn a determination as any other nation in re-equipping when they regarded as vital to the national safety. But that was not the road they wished to travel, he declared. There was a better way.

"We definitely prefer butter to guns, and are prepared to do our best by economic co-operation and working for the appeasement of Europe to secure that others may have butter in a world which does not have guns."—Reuter.

Denver, Jan. 12. We definitely prefer butter to guns, and are prepared to do our best by economic co-operation and working for the appeasement of Europe to secure that others may have butter in a world which does not have guns."—Reuter.

London, Jan. 12.

The influenza epidemic has accounted for 768 deaths throughout the large towns in Great Britain during the week ended January 9. This figure compares with 325 the previous week.

There have been 558 deaths reported in the south-eastern area, including London.

An inquiry by the Minister of Health shows that the epidemic extends from the south to the north.

The outbreak is widespread and highly infectious, but the cases reported are mostly of a mild character, most of the deaths being among elderly people.—Reuter Special.

MALAGA HEAVILY BOMBED

CRUISERS JOIN IN REBEL ATTACK

SOVIET SHIP SEIZED

Gibraltar, Jan. 12. Malaga was subjected yesterday afternoon to the heaviest bombardment of its experience.

According to reports of Danish and Norwegian steamers which were lying alongside the quays at the time, six insurgent aeroplanes appeared over the city and dropped 100 incendiary bombs.

Simultaneously, two insurgent cruisers crept up on the port and rammed 200 shells into the centre of the town.

Casualties are estimated at 300 and a hospital and other buildings were damaged and set afire.—Reuter Bulletin Service.

SOVIET SHIP SEIZED

Santander, Jan. 12. Insurgents have seized a Soviet ship off the Santander coast.—Reuter.

Arabs Urge End Of Jews' Immigration

OFFER TREATY IN PLACE OF MANDATE

Jerusalem, Jan. 12. Giving evidence before the Royal Commission in Palestine, the Mufti of Jerusalem to-day demanded the abandonment of the country as the Jewish National Home experiment, and immediate and complete stoppage of Jewish immigration.

Land purchases by the Jews must also be stopped, he urged.

The Mufti asked that the mandate be abolished and replaced by a treaty between Great Britain and the Arabs.—Reuter Bulletin Service.

ON MYSTERIOUS PARIS MISSION

DR. HJALMAR SCHACHT

FRANCO-GERMAN AMITY

RECENT TENSION FORGOTTEN SCHACHT TO VISIT PARIS

Berlin, Jan. 12. There is further evidence of the ending of Franco-German tension in the report that Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, Minister of National Economy, intends to visit Paris shortly, and ostensibly to inspect the German section of the forthcoming Paris Exhibition.

However, business circles expect he will discuss Franco-German financial and economic problems while in Paris, and there are even rumours of a French loan to Germany, for the purpose of assisting her purchases of raw materials.—Reuter.

FRANCE GRATIFIED

Paris, Jan. 12. The French Military Attaché at Tangier, Capt. Luisot, has been granted a "safe conduct" to travel freely in Spanish Morocco, including Melilla and Ceuta, by Colonel Belgbeder, acting High Commissioner of the territory.

This decision of the Spanish rebel authorities has given great satisfaction to France.—Reuter.

WIDE REFORM SOUGHT

ROOSEVELT WANTS FULL POWERS WOULD EFFECT ECONOMIES

Washington, Jan. 12. President F. D. Roosevelt is recommended to Congress the thorough reorganisation of the Government's administrative machinery, including the creation of two new Cabinet posts, namely, a Secretary of Social Welfare and a Secretary of Public Works.

He has also asked for six executive assistants to the President, whose duties will be to relieve the President of a great volume of detailed work.

President Roosevelt also recommends the grouping together of 105 independent federal agencies under appropriate departments, and the extension of the civil service to include 250,000 Government servants.

It is estimated that the reorganisation will effect economies amounting to $30,000,000 annually.—Reuter.

UNLIMITED POWER

Washington, Jan. 12. President Roosevelt, in a special message to Congress to-day, asks for almost unlimited power to effect the most complete reorganisation of the federal executive branches in the history of the nation.

He asks the right to combine over 100 different agencies in twelve major departments, directly controlled from the White House.

His message, consisting of five chief points, provides for an unprecedented degree of presidential executive management.—United Press.

IL DUCE NOW ARMY PILOT

PASSES ALL TESTS FOR COMMISSION

Rome, Jan. 12. Signor Benito Mussolini, the Italian Dictator, has gained his military air pilot's licence.

He flew for an hour and a half in his own three-engined aeroplane today, and passed all tests, including the altitude qualification, taking his machine to 4,500 metres.

Hitherto he has had only a civilian pilot's licence.—Reuter.

EVERYONE INJURED

Los Angeles, Jan. 12. The wreckage of an airliner from Salt Lake City, in which Mr. Martin Johnson and his wife, famous big game hunters, were passengers, is reported to have been found in the hills five miles from San Fernando, Cal.

Rescuers are racing to the spot, and it is still unknown whether there are any survivors.

There were ten passengers and three members of the crew aboard the plane.—Reuter.

Subsequently, the line operators announced no-one was fatally hurt.

JOHNSONS UNCONSCIOUS

The passengers include Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, just returned from exploration in Borneo.

Mr. Robinson says both Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were unconscious when he staggered away from the plane, but he could not tell how seriously they were hurt.

The crew of the plane consists of Chief Pilot W. W. Lewis, Co-pilot C. T. Owens and Stewardess Miss Edith E. Conner.

Passengers included Mr. E. E. Spencer, President of the Stromberg Electric Company of Chicago; Mr. T. Tilligelaist, executive of the Pratt and Whitney Aeroplane Motor Company, Hartford, Conn.—United Press.

BANK DIVIDEND

The Directors of the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation have decided, subject to audit, to declare a dividend of £3 per share for the half-year ended Dec. 31, 1936.

BATTALION'S TRIBUTE

No Rest Until Boy's Slayers Are in Prison

Washington, Jan. 12. The Federal Government's full resources are to be flung into the hunt for the slayer of 10-year-old Charles Mattson, by order of President F. D. Roosevelt.

In a statement, the President showed his personal emotion as a consequence of the most brutal act in America's long history of savage crime.

"This murder has shocked the nation," he exclaimed. "Every means at our command must be enlisted to capture and punish the perpetrators of this ghastly crime."

The federal agents, engaged in the search, will pursue it relentlessly. It will not be terminated until the murderer is caught.

AIRLINER CRASHES IN STORM

Everyone injured.

Los Angeles, Jan. 12. The Western Air Express Transport plane from Salt Lake to Los Angeles, crashed on a mountain top 22 miles north of here to-day, injuring all 13 occupants. It went down in a heavy rainstorm, apparently blinded.

Mr. Arthur Robinson, the first passenger rescuer brought to the Olive View Sanitarium, four miles only from the scene of the crash, said that all on board were injured.

The Director of the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation have decided, subject to audit, to declare a dividend of £3 per share for the half-year ended Dec. 31, 1936.

Lady in Wool

This outfit is smart... warm and you can get it for a fiver . . .

THIS time of year you have to plan your clothes twice over—one to be warm and once to be smart. It's no good wearing a well-thought-out outfit and spoiling the whole effect by looking blue in the face and fingers. . . . Just to prove you can look smart and at the same time keep out the east winds we've dressed this girl almost entirely in wool—underclothes and all.

The all-in cost (without cap and shoes, which we leave to you) is just what you want for this weather. Wolsey make the things.

Here's what she's wearing—
Woollen suit
Crepe de chine slip
Woollen panties and vest
Stockings.

This is what it looks like

SUIT is closely woven, in raisin colour. Straight skirt, with one centre pleat, bringing the fullness to the front.

Jacket has four buttons, does up rather high, with narrow revers, small roll collar. This leaves a small V-shaped opening, so that under it you can wear a high shirt blouse, tuck in a scarf, or on warm days get away with one of those false fronts.

The two breast pockets are tied up with oversize bootlaces, made of same stuff as the suit. Strips running down from the pockets act as loops for the woollen belt.

How to keep its Shape

TREAT your woollen suit well and it'll stand by you. It helps to hang it at night on one of those special skirt hangers that grip its waist.

And if you line the skirt round the hips with a band of shantung, or any thick silk, it

If MEN Spoke the TRUTH . . .

By Hilda Lurcott

IF men always spoke the truth to us, what an unromantic place this world would be!

Fortunately for our peace of mind, there are occasions when their innate chivalry makes them forget truth. Men have learnt to lie so charmingly and spontaneously that women are easily persuaded (for the time being) that they are speaking the truth; especially as women have a happy faculty for believing what they want to believe.

You may keep a man waiting half an hour while he mentally curses you as the most selfish and inconsiderate woman he has ever met, but when you apologise profusely he will smile and say: "Don't worry about that, my dear, it's worth it. I would gladly wait an hour for you!"

Tactful Partner

YOU make a hurried change into evening clothes, and after the first dance discover an unsightly hole in your stocking. Self-consciously you offer excuses for it, and your tactful partner exclaims gallantly: "Good gracious, why I never even noticed it!" whereas it has probably irritated him ever since you met.

Even when you trip heavily over his feet and ruin his best dance step, he will murmur sweetly: "It was entirely my fault."

All those delightful little compliments that men whisper so charmingly are often far removed from reality, but how soothing they are to our eager ears!

What woman honestly believes she is anything approaching an angel, or has eyes like liquid violets, but we love to be told so sometimes.

That is where men are so clever; they know exactly how to infuse romance into a woman's life, and if it is by the murmuring of a few delicious, harmless lies—what does it matter?

Younger than Ever

HOW refreshing it is to be told over dinner: "Why, you're looking younger than ever to-night" after that nasty little barb from Mrs. Jones in the morning: "Oh, my dear, you do look tired! I am sure, you need a change," which has rankled ever since.

All the men I have known have lied to me, and I am extremely grateful to them for it. Grateful for those romantic sentiments they have whispered to me, which have warmed my heart. Even if they were not strictly true—they have at least relieved me of monotony, and created some very happy illusions.

Sarah's Kitchen Alphabet

I for Invalid

"THE principal thing about feeding invalids," declared Sarah, "is to give them something attractive to look at, and something different, if you can."

Beef Tea and steamed fish are all very well, but what's the good of being ill if you can't have something really nice, just to tempt you?"

"I'm sure you're right, Sarah," I said. "Suppose you tell us one or two of those nice invalid dishes of yours."

So here they are.

sauce and season it with salt, pepper and chopped parsley. Keep it hot. Beat up the yolks of two eggs with salt, pepper, anchovy essence and a little of the flaked fish, and then mix in lightly the stiffly whisked whites.

Cook in the usual way, and fold in the fish and sauce mixture when the omelette is done.

So here they are.

Steamed Chicken

CUT one side of the breast from a raw chicken, and skin it. Put it on a buttered plate, sprinkle over a little salt and cover with another plate. Put the platter over a pan of boiling water, and let the water boil fast for about forty minutes.

If the chicken is not tender by then, steam it a little longer. Serve it with a little cooked spinach and with the juice it exuded poured round

Pheasant could be treated in the same way, but it should not be hung by the tail.

Apple Souffle

BAKE two large apples and sieve the flesh. Add a little grated lemon rind and the juice of a small lemon beaten up with an egg yolk. Whisk the white stiffly and fold it lightly in.

Fish Omelette

FLAKE up two ounces of cooked white fish, mix it with a tablespoonful of good white

Pour into a pretty buttered dish, and bake in a moderate oven for about ten minutes.

CINEMA NOTES

The solution of a perfectly-planned murder by the all-seeing eye of the camera is the story behind the gripping mystery drama, "Murder with Pictures," starring Lew Ayres and Gail Patrick, which has its run at the Queen's Theatre to-day. Ernest Costart, a crooked lawyer, is killed in a room crowded with people. Suspicion points to every one present, including a number of newspaper photographers who came to take pictures, and beautiful Miss Patrick, who was heard to quarrel with the lawyer shortly before his death. The girl takes refuge in Ayres' apartment when the police begin their search for her. Paul Kelly, a reporter, gets hold of a plate taken by Benny Baker, a cub reporter, which he knows will reveal the identity of the slayer. When he begins to develop print he too is murdered. Baker, in a distant city, has a print of the plate but doesn't realize its importance. But his editor does. It is placed on the new Wirephoto Service and broadcast to the world, revealing the slayer in the very act of murdering the lawyer.

"Benial Tiger"

"Bengal Tiger," a Warner Bros. picture of actual circus life and people, comes to the King's Theatre to-day. It is said to be powerful in its realism and drama, yet simple and touching in its unusual romance, appealing to warm hearts everywhere. Packed with adventure and excitement as well as romance, it is the kind of drama that touches the heart cords of men, women and children alike. The setting in which most of the plot takes place is a real circus, inside and outside the big top, the special train and winter quarters, the side shows and dressing tents. Much of the drama centres around the cages in which the wild animals are quartered, trained and exhibited. Real acrobats, aerialists, riders, clowns and animal trainers, famed in circus life, appear throughout the picture. Paul Graetz, famous German actor, plays the role of the assistant animal trainer who gave his own life to save his boss. Don Barclay, famous of the follies, has the part of a clown; Gordon Hart the role of hospital superintendent; Carlyle Moore, Jr., that of an ambulance driver, and Joseph King that of the owner of the circus. Louis King directed the picture from the story and screen play by Roy Chanslor, and Earl Felton.

"Moscow Nights"

Harry Baur, the brilliant Continental film star, whose first appearance in a British film creates a sensation, besides the aura of genius which surrounds his every movement on the screen, has acquired for himself a reputation in the studio for realism. In "Moscow Nights," now at the Majestic Theatre, he appears as Briukow, a gruff old peasant turned war contractor whose worship of the beautiful young Natasha provides a main theme of the story. "Moscow Nights" is responsible for bringing to the screen three players who, it is anticipated, by their magnificent performances will reach the heights of stardom. Harry Baur gives a performance which sweeps across the screen with power and virility; Penelope Dudley Ward more than fulfills the promise she showed in her first film—"Escape Me Never"—and Laurence Olivier, for the first time, has a role worthy of his talents. Scenes probably unparalleled in their brilliance and dramatic intensity have been created by Anthony Asquith, and include a colossal ballroom spectacle, veiling in realism with the Court Martial scene which provides the dramatic climax to the film.

Death Rather Than Defeat

New York, Dec. 28.
GANGS of workmen watched from a distance two buck deer fighting on a narrow granite ledge above the Royal Gorge, near Canon City, Colorado.

The bucks maneuvered silently for an hour, then charged. Their antlers locked, their footing finally gave way, and they plunged together over a 400-foot precipice into the Arkansas River.

TALKED 2 WEEKS NON-STOP

Memphis (Tennessee), Dec. 21.
A NURSE entered the room of Emma Wilson, a four-year-old boy in hospital here, this morning. She asked: "How are you?" The boy did not answer.

Said the nurse, "That's fine. When did you get better?" Still no answer.

"Wonderful!" said the nurse, as she ran to call the doctor. They agreed. "Marvelous!" they said.

Emma had been stricken for two weeks with a rare form of encephalitis, which kept him chattering constantly. He just couldn't stop talking. Now that he is cured he is so happy he won't talk.

"My Illness Was A Godsend"

—JESSIE MATTHEWS

By A Correspondent
GLAMOROUS Jessie Matthews, back at work in the studio after a serious illness that lasted nearly four months, thought only a week or two ago that her screen career was ended.

Actors and actresses, technicians, cameramen and carpenters had enthusiastically welcomed her back to the set at Shepherd's Bush Studios, where, writes a London representative, I saw her at work.

"One consoling thought," she told me, "is that my nervous breakdown has been, in one peculiar way, a godsend. It has done me a power of good. I feel terribly calm at all times without losing any of my naturally high spirits."

"I think it would do wonders to lots of actors and actresses to have a nervous breakdown if it afterwards affected them as it has me."

"Yet only a week or two ago I thought my career as an actress was over. It nearly broke my heart to think that I would never see a film studio again."

HOLIDAY IN THE SUN

"It is really within the last fortnight that I felt all my courage returning. I took plenty of exercise and spent the time gambling about."

Jessie is only going back to work for a few days in order to finish the film, "Head Over Heels." After that she is going away for a couple of months in the sun.

"My husband, Sonnie Hale, and I propose going on a trip to Rio de Janeiro," she said. "We may hop off at different places on the route, but I intend to make it the holiday of my life."

U.S. COMBED FOR VANISHED BRITON

New York, Dec. 31.

TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND circulars are being distributed throughout the United States by the New York Missing Persons Bureau in an effort to solve one of the most puzzling mysteries of recent years—the five weeks' disappearance of Mr. Frederick B. Lloyd, president of the £500,000 Petroleum Conversion Corporation, and a Walton-on-the-Hill, Surrey, householder.

It was on October 22 that Mr. Lloyd, who is a British subject, aged 33, had luncheon with his lawyer, Mr. Arthur Rinko, and went with him by cab to the corporation's New York offices.

When Mr. Rinko alighted, Mr. Lloyd stayed in the cab and said he would return to his hotel, the Savoy Plaza. He did not arrive and has not been seen since.

Police scotched the idea of kidnapping because no ransom demand has been received by Mrs. Lloyd.

His business and personal affairs were in perfect order. He had £15,000 in the bank.

The police declare they have his passport, thus precluding any likelihood that he intended to sail for England.

Mrs. Lloyd believes her husband to be suffering from loss of memory. They had been happily married for 30 years.

According to his doctors, Mr. Lloyd was suffering from high blood pressure, but he had fully recovered from a stroke three years ago.

LIONS ROAM IN HAWAII'S EXTINCT VOLCANO CRATER

Honolulu, T.H. Jan. 1.

Historic Diamond Head, towering extinct volcano crater and Hawaii's most widely known landmark, has become "lion country".

Jim Wahl, radio broadcaster, started the "hunt" with reports he had seen a lion while horseback riding along Diamond Head trails.

Someone recalled that "Kekiki", a mascot on the U.S.S. Monterey, leaped overboard and escaped in January, 1935, and one theory is that he may have swum ashore and made his home in the area. Kekiki, a puma, answered the description of Wahl's lion.

The "Affectionate General's" Story

GENERAL MILLAN ASTRAY, a Spanish rebel leader in Salamanca, has told the most blood-curdling "atrocious" story. "The Reds," he said, "cut off the ears of one of our aviator and a woman ate one of them in front of him."

General Asturias wants to be known as the "affectionate general."

MRS. FREER SAILS AWAY AGAIN

Sydney, Dec. 28.

MRS. M. M. Freer—the Englishwoman who was refused permission to land in Australia month ago—arrived here in the s.s. Awatea to-day, but this evening was on her way back to New Zealand.

From her cabin she said: "I'm feeling very well—and here I am again, because I never say die."

While she spoke, however, the Federal High Court was dismissing an application for a writ of habeas corpus to decide whether it could set aside the decision of the Minister of the Interior, Mr. T. Paterson, refusing Mrs. Freer permission to land.

REFUSED TEST

It was stated in court that Mrs. Freer when given a dictation test in Italian at Fremantle put her index fingers in her ears. Failure to pass the test meant she could be refused entry to Australia.

Mr. Justice Evatt ruled that failure to hear the test meant failure to pass it. The court was not authorised to inquire whether a person was a proper person to land in Australia. It had no authority to set aside the decision of a Minister, even if his ruling were wrong.

The refusal of the application did not endorse or confirm any decision by the executive.

Mrs. Freer, whom Mr. Paterson had said was entangled with an Australian Army officer, and was a heartless adventuress usurping a wife's place, has strenuously denied the allegations.

She had been in New Zealand since her entry to Australia was refused.

SHOCK HE GOT IN THE TRENCHES

IN a four-roomed cottage on the estate which her family have occupied for generations a silver-haired old lady scans the newspapers for mention of her son.

Every time she sees his name in print, she cuts out the reference and pastes it in a book. That book has become very thick by now, for this mother is Sybil Lady Eden, and her son, Mr. Anthony Eden, Britain's Foreign Secretary.

She talked to me to-day, writes a London newspaper representative, of the world-famous politician who to her is still "my boy."

"Like myself, Anthony hates war. We have cause to hate it. I lost two of my four sons in the last war."

"The eldest, John, was killed in Flanders in October, 1914. My youngest son, Nicholas, who was only 16 at the time, went down in the battle of Jutland."

"We all loved Nicholas intensely. The report of his death was a terrible shock to Anthony, who was then in the trenches."

Lady Eden smiled when I mentioned her son's reputation as the best-dressed diplomat in Europe.

"Certainly he was not the best-dressed boy," she said.

"He takes care with his dress now only because he realises it is essential for his duty. The publicity he gets about his fashionable clothes is embarrassing to him."

Anthony Eden, as a schoolboy, was not, according to his mother, a boy of outstanding scholastic gifts.

HE LOVES ART

He was sure, slow and steady—not outstandingly brilliant. "He loved history most of all," she said. "It was difficult to get him out of doors—he much preferred to sit at home reading history. And I think that his stamp-collecting gave him a wonderful knowledge of the world."

"Like his father he loved art, and he is—though I don't think he can give much time to it now—an accomplished painter in water colours."

"But music means nothing to him," she said, with a smile.

Lady Eden lives in this four-roomed cottage because she could not bear to leave her family estate of Windlesome Hall near Ferryhill, County Durham, which was sold not long ago.

Chimes Go Round The World

Canberra now regularly hears the bells of Westminster Abbey calling it to Church every Sunday morning and evening, although no Church there yet possesses a peal.

A gramophone record of the bells was recently broadcast through a very powerful amplifier from the tower of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. It was so successful, says Australasian News, that it has now been decided to make it an established practice, and three amplifiers are shortly to be installed instead of one.

The refusal of the application did not endorse or confirm any decision by the executive.

Mrs. Freer, whom Mr. Paterson had said was entangled with an Australian Army officer, and was a heartless adventuress usurping a wife's place, has strenuously denied the allegations.

She had been in New Zealand since her entry to Australia was refused.

How 'Single' Whiskies get married

"Here in Scotland," said Johnnie Walker, "we don't marry the 'single' or separate whiskies until they have matured for long years in the wood and are old enough to be blended as Johnnie Walker. The Blender then has a large number of fully matured whiskies at his disposal, and from these he achieves that blend of perfect harmony which is Johnnie Walker."

"Every time you drink Johnnie Walker you realise how happy the marriage has been, and so you will always ask for Johnnie Walker by name."

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE MARKET HIGHER YESTERDAY.

S.C. & F. Dow Jones Summary of yesterday's market:—Stocks to-day were irregularly higher. The market has turned more selective due to the automotive labour situation. There are rumours of unrestricted copper production abroad. Some uncertainty prevails on the market with regard to the Administration's legislative programme. Bonds are irregularly higher while stocks on the curb exchange are also higher.

S.C. & F. Wall Street Journal comment:—Despite the recent strength of the market, many brokers see danger in the fact that many market interests have abandoned trying to interpret developments in the foreign situation. Brokers say that public participation in the recent advance in railroad issues has been important because much buying exists in public trusts and investments. Wall Street is of the opinion that crude oil prices will be increased in the near future, or at least in April when the heaviest consumption begins.

S.C. & F. New York office cables: Stocks: The market reflects the improved sentiment in utilities and moderate realising in the main body of stocks was well absorbed. Business failures for the week amounted to 177. Bank deposits for the week totalled $15,425,000,000.

Cotton: Increased March liquidation was absorbed by the Trade. Large consumption estimates and activity in textiles encourage support. The volume of business was restricted pending determination of the differentials of loan cotton.

Wheat: Italy is again reported to be re-selling Argentine wheat. Heavier offerings by cash interests were absorbed by shorts. It is rumoured that the British are considering the purchase and storage of wheat, possibly to the extent of 250,000,000 bushels.

Rubber: The latest unfavourable turn in the automobile strike situation is disappointing.

CANTON'S TRIBUTE FAREWELL DINNER TO MR. HERBERT PRISON

Canton, Jan. 12. A farewell dinner attended by all high government officials and military commanders was given last night jointly by General Yu Han-mou, Pacification Commissioner of Kwangtung, General Huang Mo-sung, Chairman of the Kwangtung Provincial Government and Mr. Teeng Yang-fu, Mayor of Canton, to Mr. Herbert Phillips, for seven years British Consul General in Canton, who is leaving for England, prior to proceeding to Shanghai to assume his new post as Consul General there.

Hongkong And Canton

Referring to the relations between Hongkong and Canton, Mr. Phillips said: "An allusion has been made to the improvement in the relations between Canton and Hongkong. I am indeed fortunate to have been able to lend a hand in cementing better relations and I look forward to see them improve still further under the present enlightened administration."

General Yu also spoke highly of the part which Mr. Phillips played in the maintenance of Anglo-Chinese trade in South China despite the severe economic depression.

Mr. Phillips Replies

Responding Mr. Phillips said: "I am bringing to an end a period of seven years as British Consul General in Canton" during which I have had most friendly relations with the Canton Authorities and have found the work I was called upon to perform of absorbing interest. I am therefore most grateful for the sympathy and courtesy which has always been extended to me. I have witnessed many changes here during my term of office and I have come to know high military and naval officers whose friendship I value; moreover I wish specially to thank General Yu for the assistance he has always rendered to me since the assumption of his present post. I have also been associated with three Chairmen of the Provincial Government, namely General Chen-Ming-shu, Mr. Jih-Yun-kai, and now General Huang Mo-sung. I have also known no less than four holders of the important office of Mayor of Canton, namely Mr. Lin Yun-kei, Mr. Ching Tien-ku, Mr. Liu Chi-wei and now Mr. Tseng Yang-fu. To all of these I desire to pay a tribute to their broad-mindedness in the dealings between us. However, quite apart from holding this regular post I have had to my great satisfaction the pleasure of meeting at Canton many other distinguished high Chinese officials whose friendship I deeply value."

In conclusion, Mr. Phillips said that it was with genuine regret that he would leave Canton but at the same time he was glad to feel that an opportunity was given him to spend a few more years in China, a country for which he naturally had a great regard and affection. He expressed his wish for the continued prosperity of the province of Kwangtung, which certainly deserved a period of tranquillity and good fortune after all the vicissitudes of recent years.

Mr. Phillips is leaving Canton with his elder daughter on January 21 for Hongkong, whence he will sail for England. He is returning to China, with his family, in September, when he will take over the post of Consul General in Shanghai.—Reuter.

Twenty-one cases of Diphtheria with nine deaths, one case of Scarlet fever, five cases of Typhoid with four deaths, one case of Measles with one death, two cases of Meningitis and 74 deaths from Tuberculosis were reported to the local Health authorities last week. On Monday two cases of Diphtheria and three cases of Typhoid were also reported.

Mr. Phillips made a reference to the difficulty of the position which he occupied here, and expressed confidence that with political stability Kwangtung would achieve further progress in the field of reconstruction.

Mr. Phillips is leaving Canton with his elder daughter on January 21 for Hongkong, whence he will sail for England. He is returning to China, with his family, in September, when he will take over the post of Consul General in Shanghai.—Reuter.

Re-Armament Comes With Recovery

Stockholm, Jan. 12. His Majesty King Gustav opened the new Parliament today, and in his speech from the throne emphasised the need for strengthening the defences of the country, the cost of which would be 1,000,000 kroner.

No fresh taxes would be needed, however, he added, because revenue had increased owing to the Country's recovery from the economic depression.—Reuter Bulletin Service.

MOROCCO: TROUBLE CENTRE

The scare created by reports of German infiltration in Morocco has, happily, died down following mutual assurances by both Germany and France that they intend fully to respect the territorial integrity of Spain and Spanish possessions. Morocco has often figured in the news as a danger-spot, having been for many years the centre of conflicting national interests. Because of its proximity to Algeria, France has always taken a lively concern in its future. Not many years before the Great War, France and Germany almost came to a clash when, following a general rising of tribesmen, a French expeditionary force occupied Fez. The need for this action was notified to the Powers, but was resented by Spain, who suddenly seized two towns, and by Germany, who sent the gunboat Panther to Agadir and thereby almost brought on a European war. Great Britain made formal objection to Germany's acquiring territorial influence in Morocco, and the diplomatic conversations which followed resulted in the Franco-German Treaty of 1911, by which France ceded to Germany some territory in French equatorial Africa, the Cameroons, in return for recognition of her political Protectorate over Morocco. In the following year, negotiations between France and Spain as to their respective rights in Morocco came to an end with the Treaty of Madrid. By this pact, France acknowledged the right of Spain to exercise its influence in the Spanish zone, the extent of which was defined in the treaty. The Tangier district was excluded from the Spanish zone, and in 1923 a convention was signed by Great Britain, France and Spain guaranteeing the permanent security and internationalisation of this special Tangier zone. Three years later, however, Spain reopened the question by a demand for full control and incorporation of Tangier in Spanish Morocco. Great Britain and France withheld their consent, while Italy declared her interest in the matter as a Mediterranean Power, Italy's right to intervene in questions affecting the balance of power in the Mediterranean was then recognised. A new accord became effective in 1929, in which Spain was given control of policing Tangier. It will be realised, from this summary of international concern in Morocco, that the territory is one where rival interests might easily clash. Fortunately, there seems every indication at present that the nations generally, as well as the Spanish insurgents, fully realise the grave situation which would be created by the admission of foreign contingents into the territory.

ONE of the most important points which must necessarily be occupying the public mind is what will be the title taken by his wife in the event of marriage. She will be entitled to the precedence and privileges of her husband's rank.

The Privileges and Precedence ofThe New Duke of Windsor

By An Expert
LAW OF PRECEDENCE

Now that our former King has become the Duke of Windsor, everyone must wonder exactly what is his position to-day in our Constitution.

It is a situation without precedent in the history of our land. Much one can say with certitude; but there still remain details in regard to such matters as precedence about which no legal expert would commit himself without extensive research.

In this, admittedly a rather hurried survey, we can at least give some indication of what are the rights and privileges of the new Duke of Windsor and how he now stands in relation to the Constitution.

Still A Prince

THERE is slight confusion, apparently, in the minds of some people as to the status of the new dukedom.

Let it be made clear that the former King is still Prince Edward. He does not take the place of the Duke of Norfolk as premier duke. He will be the eldest of the royal Dukes, apart from the Duke of Connaught, and will, it is assumed, take precedence after the Heir presumptive.

In English history there has not been a voluntary abdication before—with the possible exception of James II. Other English Kings who have left the Throne have been forced into their abdications, some of them rather painfully.

As Prince Edward has renounced the Throne and has also undertaken that his descendants shall not be in the line of succession, it might be argued that his precedence will stand below that of any member of the Royal Family in the line of succession.

Royal Highness

ONE of the most important points which must necessarily be occupying the public mind is what will be the title taken by his wife in the event of marriage. The future wife of his Royal Highness the Duke of Windsor will obviously be known as her Royal Highness the Duchess of Windsor. She will be entitled to the precedence and privileges of her husband's rank.

In regard to the presence of

the Duke of Windsor in the Without Precedent House of Lords, this must be recognised.

He will be created a duke, presumably by Letters Patent issued either in the Court Circular or the London Gazette or in both. It will not be necessary for him to return to receive the dukedom. But to sit in the House of Lords he must receive a summons—a personal summons—and to that he is entitled as a peer.

This was established by the case of the Earl of Bristol in the reign of James I. For certain reasons the Crown wished to exclude him from the House of Lords, but his right to receive a summons was affirmed.

Of course, it is not obligatory for a peer to respond to the summons, but should the Duke decide to answer, as would an ordinary peer, there would then arise the extraordinary situation—one probably without precedents of royal Princes.

Whether this position will ever arise one cannot say, but nevertheless it is a course which Prince Edward would be clearly entitled to take.

The writ of summons would be issued by the Lord Chancellor. The issue of writs to call peers to the House is a practice which began in the 13th century.

One must distinguish between the Duke's position as a Prince of the blood and his position as a peer. He has absolutely renounced the Crown for himself and his descendants, but he cannot, of course, renounce the blood in his veins. A Prince of the blood he must remain, though legally barred from the succession.

The Duchy

A PECULIAR position—again one without precedent—is to be found in regard to the ownership of the Duchy of Cornwall.

The Duchy of Lancaster is undisputedly the appanage of the Crown; but the Duchy of Cornwall has always been regarded as the possession of the eldest son of the King.

The former King became possessor of the Duchy of Cornwall 25 years before he succeeded to the Throne; and it is not improbable that some special legislation will be required to settle the point.

When Travelling

IN the event of Prince Edward's marriage, and should there be any children, there may be some question concerning their titles, but these would normally be those of the sons and daughters of a duke.

In his travels abroad, whether our late King should go, he will presumably be treated as his brothers, with the diplomatic immunity accorded to royal Princes.

HONGKONG AND THE TREATY OF WASHINGTON

By
A SUNDAY TIMES STAFF REPORTER

Darwin

ONE interesting development may result, however, from Britain's new strategy in the Far East.

The Sunday Times understands the advisability of using Darwin as a summer base for Britain's China Squadron instead of Wel-Hal-Wel, to be discussed at the Imperial Conference which is to be held during the Coronation.

British naval experts have come to the conclusion that Wel-Hal-Wel, which is north of Shanghai, could not be defended in event of hostilities with a neighbouring Power.

The China Squadron could be bottled up rapidly by hostile warships and aircraft, and virtually destroyed before it was able to escape to Hongkong or Singapore.

On the other hand, Darwin is much more suitable to the Navy's strategic requirements.

It could not easily be taken by surprise. It is outside any Power's practicable operating range.

Close Link

MOREOVER, the establishment of a base at Darwin would provide a welcome opportunity for combined manoeuvres of the China, India, and Australian squadrons, and would be closely linked to Singapore.

The China Squadron, more than 20 units of which will visit Singapore this month, includes the aircraft carrier Hermes, several county class cruisers, destroyer and submarine flotillas, and minelayers.

The Squadron, if based on Darwin, could dock and refit at Singapore. The Royal Navy already regards Darwin as Singapore's auxiliary base, forming a strong triangle with Trincomalee (Ceylon), and preventing access by an Asiatic fleet to the Indian Ocean.

Discussion of the transference of the base of the China Squadron from Wel-Hal-Wel to Darwin will probably be hastened by the conclusion of the Japanese-German pact.

Australian naval authorities, The Sunday Times understands, are favourable to the idea, although they would naturally prefer to see the establishment of a naval base on the east coast of Australia, which would be a stronger safeguard to the Commonwealth.

Advance Base

REFORTIFICATION on such a scale was not anticipated in Japan, where it was believed that Britain had decided to withdraw her first line of defences to Singapore.

Britain considers, however, that Singapore is not a sufficient guard against Japan. Hongkong is needed as a powerful advance base.

Neither Hongkong nor Singapore, however, can be described as bases capable of being used for aggression against Japan. Hongkong is too close enough for attack on Japan, and it is already accepted that Japan is impregnable, so far as sea attack is concerned, behind her own natural defences.

Japan has concealed her military activities in Formosa by making every strategic centre a "prohibited

LETTER TO GIRL COSTS LIFE PUBLIC SCHOOLBOY FEARED FOR HIS CAREER "No Punishment"

Monmouth, Dec. 28.
NICHOLAS PENN YOUNG, sixteen-year-old public schoolboy son of Dr. Hubert Turner Penn Young, of Du Cane-road, W., psychologist and medical officer at Wormwood Scrubs jail, jumped under a train because a housemaster had found a letter he had written to a girl.

The coroner, Mr. Herbert Williams, at the inquest on Young at Monmouth to-night said the boy took too grave a view of the discovery of his breach of discipline and wrongfully imagined it might affect his future career.

MUST NOT ENTER AUSTRALIA "Refused to Hear Test."

SYDNEY (N.S.W.) Dec. 31.
MRS. M. M. FREER, wife of a British Indian Army officer, a subject who is related by marriage to the late Lord Cave, has lost her case before the Sydney High Court.

Mr. Justice Evatt had granted a rule on a writ of habeas corpus, which was heard to-day, to decide whether the High Court could set aside the decision of the Minister of the Interior, Mr. Paterson, that she should not be allowed to enter Australia.

A month ago, at Fremantle, Mrs. Freer was given a dictation test in Italian, and was refused permission to land on the technical ground that she could not pass the examination.

She arrived to-day from New Zealand in the Awaera, and on the direction of the judge, that she should not be removed from the jurisdiction of the Court, she was allowed to land.

FAILED TO HEAR TEST

When the case came before the Court, evidence was brought forward to show that when Mrs. Freer was given the dictation test at Fremantle, she put her index fingers in her ears. Mr. Justice Evatt dismissed the application, ruling that failure to hear the test constituted failure to pass the test.

He said that the legislature had not given the court authority to inquire into whether a person was fit and proper person to land in Australia, and the court did not have authority to set aside the decision of a Minister, even if it were wrong.

He added that the refusal of the application did not endorse or confirm any decision by the Executive.

ALLEGATIONS DENIED

On November 11, Mr. Paterson said that Mrs. Freer had been excluded because she had become "entangled" with a married Australian officer and was a person of "undesirable character." She strongly denied all the allegations against her.

The Australian Cabinet has supported Mr. Paterson in his attitude. —United Press.

Young's body had been found, covered with frost, huddled beside the railway line at dawn on Dec. 26.

Mr. Edgar W. Siddons, a housemaster at Monmouth School, described how he found a letter written by Young and addressed to a girl, on a table on the day Young disappeared.

"INNOCENT"

Mr. Siddons read the letter, which was quite innocent, such as Young might have sent to his sister.

He had not threatened Young with any punishment and he had not said he would report him to the headmaster.

Mr. C. F. Scott, the headmaster, described Young as a healthy boy. He had been accepted for the Nautical College at Pangbourne.

The boy's father, Dr. Young, told the coroner that his son, who was happy and care-free, had received a slight concussion playing football. A week or two later he had been very violent speaking of some trivial incident.

The coroner said two letters found on Young convinced him that the boy, acting on an insane impulse, took his own life.

Dr. Young attached no blame to Monmouth School for the tragedy.

These two sisters—twins—make an impressionable picture as they sit at their piano.

Theory On Trinity of Genius Links Shakespeare, Bacon, King Edward VI

By JOSEPH L. MYLER

New York, Jan. 1.
The tragic and mysterious story of Edward VI, England's brilliant boy king who ascended the throne for a brief tenure after the death of Henry VIII, was retold to-day—with the tragedy translated into a living martyrdom and the mystery merged with that which clouds the history of William Shakespeare and Francis Bacon.

To J. Edward Morgan, of Alameda, a gray-haired little man with intense, dark eyes, Edward, Shakespeare and Bacon were one person—the "greatest genius" of literary world has ever known."

For 30 years, Morgan, known in his native state as the "Nebraska Post," has been studying Shakespearean lore.

He became a worshipper of Shakespeare as a lad riding herd in Nebraska. As a school teacher he pursued his studies. As a frontier printer he added to his knowledge.

Sure of Similarity

In 1923, he told the United Press to-day, he discovered striking similarities in manuscripts of the boy king, the Elizabethan poet and the great essayist—strange cryptographic treatment of letters which, scanned in the right perspective, became the restorated monogram, "E V I" or "E T."

In 1929 he went to London to supplement the evidence he had found in this country and to seek confirmation of the exciting surmise which gripped his mind.

In the years since he has been analyzing and organizing his data, which includes scores of photo-static copies of manuscripts, wood-engraved and written, of the king, the playwright and the critic of manners.

Two Writers Often Linked

For centuries lovers of the mysterious have linked Shakespeare and Bacon. The same gaps in the record of their early lives, the unposititious nature of much of the writing concerning them, and the alphabetical clovers in documents left by each afforded a basis for fascinating comparisons which, in many minds, established the two personalities as one.

Into the mystery Morgan brought Edward VI, asserting that the trinity of genius thus concealed developed from the mind of one man, the "beautiful child" of Henry VIII and the unhappy Jane Seymour, Henry's third wife.

Bacon, he said, made use of a "two-alphabet" or "bilateral" cipher both in his written and wood-engraved manuscripts.

"He manipulated the letters—scratching them, marking them in various ways, changing letters into other letters," Morgan said, to produce invariably the monogrammed "E VI" or "E T."

Reason as to Objects

The monograms obviously represented Edward VI or Edward Tudor, and were sprinkled throughout his works in an attempt by Bacon, the unthrone king, in Morgan's theory, to disclose his true identity to posterity.

Historians say that Edward VI, who at 13 translated Cicero's "de Philosophia" into Greek and who was renowned as a student of virtually all the arts and sciences, died when he was 16.

It is known that while he was on the throne rival factions among the intrigues engaged in all manner of intrigue in their attempts to dominate Edward, control the government and determine the succession. The Duke of Northumberland, according to Morgan's researches, even attempted to poison the young king.

Says King Escaped

Morgan interpreted evidence gleaned from contemporary documents, which he photographed in England, as indicating that Edward fled from the plotters and later returned in disguise.

Dialogue in Shakespeare's "Merry Wives of Windsor," "Cymbeline" and "Hamlet" could have been written only by someone intimately familiar with private details of the king's life, Morgan asserted.

On the title pages of Shakespeare's plays, in introductory matter, and in parts of the text, Morgan said he found the Baconian "bilateral" cipher with the "inevitable" monogram—E

VI—and on one page of a Shakespearean manuscript he spotted, and photographed, a line which, deciphered, spelled "Francis Bacon."

The monogram also is to be found on Shakespeare's coffin, Morgan said, and repeatedly in woodcut portraits of Bacon.

Historian in Accord

Morgan said his evidence had convinced Launcelot Surry, of Portsmouth, Eng., historian of Edward VI, that "Edward Sixth did live on to write the entire Shakespearean canon and much great literature besides, using many alias names, for he had no name of his own that he dared use."

After Elizabeth became queen, Morgan theorized, Edward felt it would be unsafe to present himself as the rightful occupant of the throne, fearing such a step would precipitate civil war that would destroy England.

He fulfilled his genius by "creating the world's greatest literature," Morgan said, content to think that perhaps centuries hence a discerning scholar would discover the "voluminous and manifest proofs" of his identity.

He became a worshipper of Shakespeare as a lad riding herd in Nebraska. As a school teacher he pursued his studies. As a frontier printer he added to his knowledge.

LET YOUR BOY GO TO THE PICTURES, MOTHER IS TOLD

A MOTHER faced the magistrates in East Ham Juvenile Court. Said the chairman (Mr. W. G. Davie): "Remember, we are living in 1936. This is probably the first time we have had to say that to a parent."

The mother's sixteen-year-old son was accused of stealing a bicycle. He was bound over for a year.

At a previous hearing it was stated that he ran away from home after a quarrel with his mother because he had to be home at nine o'clock on Sunday nights and 9:30 on Saturday evenings.

Having examined what were described as excellent reports on the boy's character, Mr. Davie said: "He is not a child by any means. Do not forget when he wants to go to the pictures occasionally, just as you do when he goes to a church social."

Sportmen hunting in the Scottish Highlands complain that they have been finding nudists.

PRESCRIPTION FOR HAPPINESS

Here are the latest rules for the successful marriage, as laid down in an address at Philadelphia, by Miss Betsy Libby, General Secretary of the Family Society:

1. Don't marry till you have saved at least a quarter of what you expect to spend during the first year of marriage.

2. Don't pay more than one day's income a week in rent.

3. Don't buy a house costing more than double a year's income.

4. Don't buy things that you really can't afford on the instalment plan, however much you may long for them.

5. Don't try to save too much on a small income by stinting yourself of food and other necessities.

6. To the bride—don't work after marriage if it will cause serious conflict with your husband.

EX-LOVER SHOOTS BRIDE IN CHURCH

Warsaw, Dec. 28.

BRIDESMAIDS and parents led beautiful Elsa Shochet, professor of astronomy, into a Warsaw church to be married to Edward.

Bells pealed, an organ thundered the Wedding March. All eyes in the church turned downstairs to Elsa, ten paces behind her bridesmaids.

Into her path sprang a man. He raised a revolver and shot her through the heart without a word.

Her killer was ex-lover Exkard, young student who had fallen desperately in love with his teacher. He shot her to prevent her marrying another man. Exkard surrendered to the police. Elsa Shochet was carried away while the organist, unaware of her death, still played the Wedding March.

PROBABLE NUCLEUS OF COLONY INTERPORT FOOTBALL TEAM

SELECTION COMMITTEE'S POLICY IN CHOOSING THE SIDE

QUIETLY, but determinedly, the Interport Selection Committee is getting on with the hundred and one details connected with the satisfactory arranging of the football Interport against Shanghai which takes place next month. Meetings are being constantly held and new points dealt with and settled. The public knows little of this side of the committee's work, and it is not the sort of thing one hears talked about. More direct is the interest the public has in (a) the policy the committee is adopting in the matter of finding a suitable team to represent the Colony and (b) the eventual personnel of the team. It is not easy to obtain enlightenment on either point, but I have been able to ascertain certain probabilities.

Contrasting Policies

SO far as policy is concerned, the S. Committee intends to more or less follow precedent and tradition. This is rendered more than ordinarily interesting by the fact that Shanghai has embarked upon an entirely new procedure. Shanghai has thrown overboard the old methods, and instead of haphazardly selecting trial teams of whom, usually, only about five per cent. ever figure in the final Interport side, they have firmly circularised players discovering whether they will be available to make the trip. Of course in Hongkong's case this is not necessary—at least for this season. Having secured this information, they have chosen some 17 players and nominated them as more or less definite members of the squad. They are not fixing trial matches; that is in the usual sense of the term. They are pitting various combinations drawn from these 17 against Shanghai's teams, thus fulfilling the dual purpose of discovering the strongest team and at the same time giving the players opportunities of getting acquainted and of formulating tactics and plans. All this appears to be highly commendable, and preferable, I think, to the time-worn and haphazard methods which have hitherto featured the work of selection committees both here and in Shanghai.

Hongkong's Policy

HONGKONG has a much less defined policy. So far as I can make out only one trial match will be played. Perhaps that's a good thing. But various representative games have been already played this season, and will be during the next fortnight, regarded as unofficial trials. In other words players who take part in the Kowloon Cup and Governor's Cup matches can regard themselves as possible Interport candidates. This, presumably, will enable the selectors to shoo up current form. After two teams—the good old Probables and Possibles—will be chosen for a final try-out, and from that point the eventual team to represent the Colony will walk straight on to the field for the Interport. I am not going to draw comparisons between this system and that of Shanghai's, because in any case the Associations are in somewhat different positions. Whereas it is imperative for Shanghai to get together its team as early as possible as they have to travel down to Hongkong, the Colony can afford to wait a bit, as they have all necessary talent on the spot. It's a big difference. Neither am I going to criticise Hongkong's methods, for it is possible they will produce just as good results as any alternative—though there may be sound reason to doubt this. What it boils down to is that the selectors are expected to pick the best team available, and if they cannot do it after watching a New Year's Day representative match, two Cup encounters and a full-dress trial match, then they have good cause to excuse their complaints.

To Play Or Not

To Play?

BUT my own conviction is that we could field at least two alternative elevens capable of beating Shanghai on our own ground, and because of this the selector committee is greatly assisted in its task. However, we should like to see the best team turn out and I know the committee is going to leave no stone unturned to accomplish this. One big question—and it is by no means settled—is whether Colony league players who are Canton residents, will be included. I have it on good authority that the committee would prefer not to include them if it is possible to find a team strong enough to represent Hongkong without them. That is a welcome indication that the Association is at least partially cognisant of certain ethical obligations attached to the observance of the Interport competition rules; even so it is only half a gesture. They would be far better advised to forget all about their Canton players, and then straighten out this irritating tangle of impracticable rules between the end of the season and the next Interport. In any case only two players are likely to be affected, and I don't think anyone would argue that their places cannot be fairly adequately filled by resident players. Let the good old adage "Honesty is the best policy" be the guiding principle with the Selection Committee over this matter.

These Are Ear-Marked

SPECULATION as to the composition of the Interport is now becoming ripe. I have good reason to believe that among others who are ear-marked for inclusion are Rowlands, A. V. Gosano, Boltrao, Lee Wal-long, Wilson, and Blackford. This six, I believe, will form the nucleus of the team no matter what the unofficial and official trials reveal. There is the question of another full back, two wing halves and a right wing. I believe either Dave Leonard or Lai Shul-wing (if the Canton players are excluded) will play at inside right. Irwin is a definite possibility for the right wing, but I haven't heard the name of Tang Kwong-sum or Fowler mentioned. As to the left wing, though Blackford is said to be a certainty, I have an idea selectors will be asked to watch the Chinese left winger in the Governor's Cup. One also wonders whether Hartigan is in the position of being "out" of sight, out of mind." The wing halves will probably be most difficult to select. North's inclusion in the Governor's Cup team (and as captain at that) gives a broad hint about the right half berth, and selection would appear to rest between him and Leung Wing-chui. Lee Kwok-wai may seem to be an obvious choice for the other flank, yet I know competent critics doubt his ability to last for 90 minutes, despite his polished technique. Bliss is apparently regarded as a possible, but I wonder if the selectors have given thought to Evans and Taylor of the Fusiliers. Both seem to have claims, especially the first named, who is a first-class intermediate. If neither Li Tin-sang nor Tam Kong-pak are going to be considered, I suggest that it might be worth while trying Pickering at right back, and Gosano at left. Stevens is left back in the Governor's Cup team, but I think Pickering is a superior defender in his position at right back, while Gosano can play in either place with equal facility. But come what may, there can be no doubt that Hongkong has a wealth of talent at its disposal, and it is hard to imagine the Colony turning out a losing team on February 11.

London, Jan. 12.

The Professional Golfers' Association has officially protested against the "limitation" of the number of clubs and sent a letter to the Royal and Ancient Club expressing the opinion that it is unnecessary and undesirable to restrict the game in that manner.

Such a limitation would interfere with the freedom of golfers in the matter of equipment, rules,

F. A.'s "Either Play Or Drop Out Of The First Division"

EFFECT OF FLEET'S DEPARTURE

MEMBERS of the League Management Committee of the Hongkong Football Association listened with something approaching amazement to a letter received from the Royal Navy at their meeting on Monday evening.

The letter requested permission for the Navy to postpone all first division league matches from January 12 to March 13 as the Fleet would be absent from the Colony.

Having recovered from their astonishment the committee politely, but firmly, replied "Nothing Doing."

The letter, which was terse and to the point, firstly asked that two senior division players—Wride and Le Page—receive permission to be relegated to the junior team, and secondly that the first division team's fixtures between January 12 and March 13 be cancelled until a later date as the Fleet is leaving Hongkong and would not be returning until March.

Due consideration was given to both requests, and the following decisions reached.

That the two senior players be permitted to transfer to the junior team.

That the Royal Navy either field a team to play their first division fixtures according to schedule, or withdraw from that league.

It is not yet known which alternative the Navy will choose.

ASSOCIATION ACTS CORRECTLY

Commenting on the question "Veritas" writes:

While one can easily and naturally sympathise with the Navy inasmuch as that they have this week lost the major part of the first eleven, the action of the Football Association must be commended. To permit the Navy to cancel all fixtures for the next two months would create a chaotic state in the first division programme never before experienced and sufficient to ruin completely the whole league.

There have already been more rugby dismissals this season than in the last two full seasons, and the increase has not been due to referees taking a stronger line on scrummage infringements. Only two players have been ordered off for persistent infringements.

Half the cases have been for fighting, and one for "talking" to the referee. One of the offenders was an army officer, who has since played for his country.

There is no record of an Irishman having been sent off in an important club game.

Even now the league is well behind its schedule, and the Navy are among the senior division teams which have not brought their programmes up to date.

Further suspension of fixtures would probably result in the complete disintegration of the first division.

One hopes most sincerely that the Navy will be led to accept the position and to do their utmost to turn out a senior division team. The last thing wanted is the withdrawal of the Senior Service from the first division, for their contribution to the advance of good football in Hongkong has always been considerable. And if it were possible one would be happy to see the Navy accommodated in their request. But the results are too obvious to permit of such a thing, and the alternative of the Football Association is therefore made untenable.

One intriguing position arises. The F.A. has given permission for two senior players to be relegated to the junior team, which takes effect forthwith. Therefore, if the Navy choose to accept the Association's first alternative—to field a first division team—presumably these players will be required. Presumably in such an event the Navy will have to make further application for their reinstatement as senior players.

SHANGHAI'S INTERPORT HOCKEY TROUBLES

Shanghai, Jan. 12.

The final selections for the Shanghai Ladies Hockey Association interport team will be made on Sunday next, when the fourteen remaining players, most of whom have played in four trials, will be tried against a fairly strong men's side made up of Army players.

Miss D. Bloomfield, who had not originally tried for a place, showed up so well last Sunday that she has been invited to appear as a candidate. Her position is left wing forward. The other forwards are: Loti Schmidt, M. Williams, Mary Sheridan, Mary Malinovsky and Jean McKeown.

In the half-back line are: Elsie Little, Phan Petigura, Nora Kelly and Winnie Ambrose. With Evelyn Vicat dropping out due to illness, Esther Bloomsfield and Frances Somko will fill the positions of right and left fullback, respectively.

The two goalkeepers, Barbara Dunlop and Laura Carlon, have both shown good form in the trials, the former possibly being a little faster on her feet. The latter, however, has had considerably more experience.

It seems quite possible that Shanghai will turn out their strongest side to date. It only remains for the final selections to be made and the players to continue their training under the capable guidance of Capt. W. G. Clarke, during the four weeks remaining before the team hopes to sail for Hongkong.

The only obstacle remaining in the way of the trip is the financial one. In this connection, the association last year had to bear the burden of expenses when they entertained the Hongkong women's side, without having the opportunity of making the profit they had anticipated on their interport dinner dance which, owing to unfortunate circumstances that arose, had to be cancelled. Also the unprecedented bad weather experienced during almost the whole of the interport visit made it necessary to cancel one match and interchange.

The ladies' hockey interport team is to leave for Hongkong by the Express of Asia on February 9, unless financial difficulties intervene.

The team will be selected after the final trial match on Sunday, and it is expected to be the strongest that Shanghai will be capable of putting into the field.—Reuter.

Gaps have also occurred among the forwards. A. M. Kennedy, who has been playing regularly for the 1st XV since his arrival at the beginning of the season, is down with scarlet fever, which means that he will not be able to play against Hongkong, who will be arriving in Shanghai on February 10 and meeting the 1st XV of the Club on February 11 in the annual Interport match. Kennedy's illness is not the only piece of bad news. I. M. Macrae, who led the pack in both the Meiji matches and is also a newcomer to Shanghai this season, is ill. He is reported to have some kind of fever. Let us hope it does not prove to be scarlet fever too.

Shanghai And The Rugby Interport

VALUED PLAYERS ARE LOST

Rugby activities, after a lapse over the New Year holidays, have resumed in Shanghai, but with depleted ranks, particularly among members of the 1st XV. In the first place the Selectors will have to find some men to fill the gap caused by the tragic death of E. M. Slater. Slater was undoubtedly the Rugby "find" of the year and to replace his talents will be impossible.

Thus, in spite of all efforts which have been made since early this season, by the committee and members of the association, to raise funds for their treasury, and while the interport candidates are prepared to take care of a certain amount of their expenses for the trip, there is still a large deficit to be made up before Hongkong's invitation can be accepted.

The Man Who Should Go On Our Next Cricket Tour

FIRST CLASS TRAINER IS DESIRABLE

(By Bruce Harris)

Sydney. The late Herbert Chapman, builder of the Arsenal's fame in football, once told me, with his entertaining emphasis, that "if I could take my trainer with the party I could win the Ashes in Australia with a second-class side."

An exaggeration no doubt—he did exaggerate—but I believe with more than a tinge of truth in it. Some day or other the M.C.C. may send their sides out here under a trainer; the result inevitably will be seen in greater cricket efficiency.

Trainers have come into their own in boxing, in football, lately, in lawn tennis—our Davis Cup side after years of indifference had its trainer last season. They ought, I suggest, to be part of every cricket side which goes overseas after the "Ashes." Trainers, I mean, of high skill in massage and treatment of minor injuries, as well as work on the running track and in the gymnasium.

Do not misunderstand me. I am not implying that the 17 men of whom I see so much in Australia are living slack lives, staying up late o' nights and overdrinking. They are not. They are voluntarily an abstemious crowd; not in the main strict teetotallers, but reasonably careful.

WOULD GO STALE

For five months of more or less continuous cricket, I agree, men cannot be maintained in the same way as for a football match once a week. They would go hopelessly stale.

Granted all that, there must be a certain physical pitch to which cricketers, like all other athletes, are best trained; rule-of-thumb methods are as out of place in this game as in any other. Science must displace rule of thumb for maximum results.

Out here it is the practice at every town to have a local masseur in the dressing-rooms. Think of the extra convenience and efficiency of having one, equipped with electrical appliances, daily accessible, in the hotels with the men: an expert able to "cook up" sprains and bruises and remove them with maximum speed; an expert knowing the make-up physically of every man of the side.

There must be for every cricketer, as much as for a boxer or footballer, "correct fighting weight." If he enters the field accordingly, it is a reasonable assumption that he is better able to bat, bowl or field, less liable to strains such as have handicapped our side this tour. Ought not fast-bowlers especially to be trained to the ounce with due regard, of course, to the fact that their effort spreads itself over months rather than days?

"SCRAPPERS"

In Australia it is the "scrappers" as much as the cricketer who wins matches—the man fired with never-say-die, who will bat, bowl or field till he drops. The Jardine side of 1932-3 contained a high proportion of the best sort of scrappers, largely

OVERCROWDED GROUNDMelbourne Cricket Club Severely Criticised

Melbourne, Jun. 12.

The Health Commission scathingly criticises the crowding of the ground for the Test Match on January 4, and says that only luck prevented loss of life, when the crowd rushed the unfinished section of concrete, which was still unset. The crushing against the locked gates after the end of play might have resulted in deaths.

The aisles and gangways were overcrowded and the situation most dangerous in the event of a panic. The Commission has directed the Melbourne Club to retise the estimated capacity and prevent any further entry after the capacity limit has been reached.

Later. The Melbourne Cricket Club has announced that new regulations will be enforced for the clearance of the stand gangways in future Test Matches, although this will restrict attendances.—Reuter.

Mild, aromatic, stimulating, refreshing. Yes, there are "cocktails" and "Cocktails". Nevertheless they are practically made everywhere to the same recipes. The difference lies less in the mixing than in the gin. Just try a bottle of Silver top DRY GIN and mix a Martini! Or ask for once at the bar for your drink mixed with BOLS' Gin (although your barman will probably be using it already). That will be the best proof! BOLS' Gin gives your cocktail a certain character which makes just the difference between the usual and perfection, between a cocktail and a "cocktail as it should be". SCHMELING VERSUS BRADDOCKFIGHT MAY BE STAGED IN BERLIN

New York, Dec. 17. A group of wealthy Europeans has started negotiations to transfer the Jimmy Braddock-Max Schmeling heavyweight title fight next June from New York to Berlin, it was learned to-day.

Dennis Scanlon, an international business man with headquarters in London and New York, has conferred with Madison Square Garden, co-promoter of the bout with the Club. He said John Read Kilpatrick, Garden President, is "interested in the proposition if certain conditions can be met."

Although he has not conferred with Mike Jacobs, 20th Century Club promoter who is opposed to a transfer, Scanlon said he planned to leave for Germany immediately after Christmas to "see about meeting those conditions."

$1,750,000 GATE

According to Scanlon, the Garden and others connected with the fight fear that anti-Nazi sentiment in New York will cause a small gate if held at the Garden Bowl on Long Island and because they know the set-up is ideal for a huge gate in Berlin.

Scanlon said a group of friends in Europe with unlimited backing, after investigating the possibility of a Berlin fight in July, "concluded it would attract a gate of more than $1,750,000. They found that Berlin's Olympic stadium could seat close to 200,000 persons for a fight."

"Never before have circumstances offered such an ideal situation for a big European fight. The challenger, Schmeling, is Germany's athletic idol. He is a close friend of Hitler. Hitler and his associates desire this fight," Scanlon said.

Scanlon said the bout appeared so attractive financially that his group empowered him to offer the American promoters $500,000 to buy the fight outright and let them promote it, including paying the participants.

Jacobs said he was not interested in a fight.

"I can tell you right now that there'll be no title fight outside the United States. I own half that show and I won't permit it. It would be a slap in the face of our own boxing commission," Jacobs said.

Braddock's manager, Joe Gould, admitted Scanlon had sounded him out and, "I told Scanlon that Braddock didn't care where he fought just so that he got his money out of it."—United Press.

Badminton Tournament SupportedFIVE ENTRIES IN SHANGHAI EVENT

Entries for the International Badminton tournament, sponsored by the Shanghai Badminton Association, are closing.

To date, five teams have entered for this tournament. Entries have been received from a Norwegian team, represented by Berents and da Silva Getz, B. V. de Senna and da Silva will don Portuguese colours while Wilson and Forbes will play for Scotland.

A team representing France has also been received, Meise and Mary or Chaillan having been elected to play for that unit. The Chelms brothers will represent Greece.

Teams representing England, Australia, China, U.S.A. and Canada will probably be entered for the International tournament, though no word has yet been received from these groups. England should have a strong team as players of the culture of Spagnoli, Stokes and Wade are available. Leong Hong-teck and Kang Boon-song, members of St. John's team, should form a strong combination and are likely to be China's entries.

Should Canada and the U.S.A. enter, their teams will most likely be Squires and Carson, representing America and Duff and Sullivan, Canada. Australia's team will probably be Kew and Eardley.

This tournament has received enthusiastic reception from clubs and should turn out to be one of the most interesting to be held this season. Its success may lead to it being permanently adopted as one of the annual fixtures of the Association.

PETER KANE IN ACTIONANOTHER GREAT DISPLAY

(By Fred Dartnell)

London, Dec. 15. Peter Kane, the Liverpool flyweight, is the big drawing card amongst the smaller men of the ring just now, and last night at Earl's Court there was again a good attendance to see him repeat his usual victory.

Kane's opponent was the Belgian lad, Gaston Vandembos, and although he put up an amazing display of toughness and pluck Kane won in the sixth round, the bout being stopped by the referee, Mr. Jack Smith.

At this stage Vandembos had been hammered and punched from pillar to post. Kane hunted him all over the ring and never allowed him a second's rest.

Kane's speed and superior skill eclipsed all but the splendid courage and pugnacity of the Belgian.

Vandembos never endeavoured to evade any of the pitiless punishment to which he was subjected. In fact, he rushed to meet it and even Kane seemed to be surprised to find his little rival coming up again and again for the fray.

Kane exploded all the punches. The first to get home was a smashing right to the stomach, but his two-handed hammering to the head, with the straight left never missing its target, had the Belgian dizzy and stumbling early on.

WIN FOR MCLEAVE

Towards the end of the fifth round a crashing right put Vandembos in a kneeling position on the floor. It seemed all over, but at the count of eight he rose quickly, and the bell went before Kane could continue the slaughter. Then came the start of the sixth round, and 25 seconds later Vandembos was staggering half silly under a hall of blows when the bell was stopped, and wisely so.

Dave McCleave, the ex-welter-weight champion, made his debut last night as a middle-weight against Bob Simpkins, of Bridlington. At 11st. 1 lb. McCleave looked bigger and in fine fettle. In the second round he floored Simpkins for eight with a right to the jaw, but afterwards he seemed content to just score his points, chiefly with the left hand. In the seventh round the referee stopped the bout with Simpkins again on the floor. McCleave had made good in his new role.

FRENCH TENNIS RANKINGS

Christian Boussus, for the past two years France's first-ranked player, has lost that position in the official rankings for 1936 which have just been issued, Reuter states. The honour has been jointly awarded to Jean Borotra and Bernard Destremau, who are 38 and 18 years old respectively.

Boussus has to be content with joint third place with Paul Feret and A. Merlin; A. Martin-Legesey in sixth and Marcel Bernard and J. Jamain are equal seventh.

Mme. Mathieu retains her place as France's leading woman player, while second place is taken by the Comtesse de la Valdene (formerly Sonoria Lili d'Alvarez). Mme. Henrotin takes third place, while Mme. S. Iribarne, who was second last year, drops to fourth place.

The following are the complete rankings, with last year's placings in brackets:

Intelligence Tests for Children

DO not expect your child to be able to do all the tests in the following age groups.

But he should be able to score in at least one of the tests if they are presented in familiar surroundings by a person in whom the child has complete confidence.

Simple for a Start

AGE 3.—Test 1: Show the child a sheet of plain paper, measuring about 4 inches by 5 inches. Tell him to watch you making a book out of it. Then fold the paper double and press it down. Open and close the paper several times, pointing out that it looks like a little book. Then hand the child a similar piece of paper and ask him to make you a book.

SCORING. If the child folds the paper one or more times so that it leaves a clear crease, the response is a success. It does not matter if the fold is irregular or even diagonal.

Test 2: Ask the child to indicate with a finger parts of his face—such as nose, eyes, ears, mouth, hair. Use your normal method of speech in doing this.

SCORING. Three responses out of if your child is between 3 and 5 years old, try him with these questions four must be correct for the child to the child names three objects in one of his mouth instead of actually pointing at the features mentioned you can consider it quite satisfactory.

Test 3: Find a large coloured picture (from a book or magazine if you like) with plenty of objects and life in it. Praise the picture and give it to the child so that he can see it comfortably and clearly.

Then ask him to tell you what he sees in the picture. If there is no immediate response you may help the child by saying "Show me the..." indicating some specific object. That should be sufficient to start the child's replies.

SCORING. The test is passed if the child points to the right object three times in a row.

Test 4. Test 1: On an ordinary postcard, rule two parallel lines about one inch apart. Make one line half an inch longer than the other.

Then give the card to the child and ask him to point to the longer line.

You may use the superlative "longest" if you like, as it will probably be more familiar to the child.

Then withdraw the card and present it from another angle. Do this once again, so that the child has seen the lines in three different positions.

SCORING. All three comparisons must be made correctly, or you cannot consider the child successful.

Test 2: Put four pennies (or other coins) in a row in front of the child, and ask him to count them aloud as he touches each one. You may point to the first on the child's left, and say "Like this, 'One'."

SCORING. The child has passed the test if his counting tallies with his pointing. He has failed if he just mentions the right number of the coins.

Test 3.—On a postcard draw a star—thus leaving room for the child to copy it. He can use pencil, pen or crayon.

SCORING. Any attempt in which the main characteristics of a star are present is a success. The number of the arms does not matter, but they must cross in the centre and give the effect of radiating out.

Length of Lines

AGE 5.—Test 1: Drive two ordinary $\frac{1}{4}$ in. screws into a solid piece of wood. Show the child how to take out one with a screwdriver. Then hand him the driver and ask him to remove the other screw.

SCORING. This is reckoned by the time it takes the child to get the screw right out. One minute is exceptionally good time for five-year-olds. Three minutes is an average time.

Test 2: Paint or crayon four patches of colour—red, yellow, blue, green (four similar objects in these colours or squares cut from different book jackets will serve as well).

Put the colours in a row in front of the child and say "What is the name of this colour?" to each in turn. If you are using objects, explain first that you are only interested in the colours, not in the shape of the objects.

SCORING. The test is passed if all the colours are named correctly the first time. This test is not based on a colour sense, as all five-year-olds who have ordinary sight should be able to discriminate between these colours and will already have associated them in the mind with the right name by observation of adults.

Test 3.—See whether the child can carry out three very simple orders. Repeat the order twice—the first time explaining that you want him to do certain things for you.

Do not alter the position of the orders in the repetition, and leave the child alone with his task if necessary. Such orders as "Bring me that vase (pointing at it), then put this pencil on the table and then open the door."

SCORING. All three commissions should be carried out in the right order. This test is a useful one to try out a child who is just starting school. If he passes it well he will take quickly and easily to orthodox school learning.

Test 4.—On a postcard draw a star—thus leaving room for the child to copy it. He can use pencil, pen or crayon.

SCORING. Any attempt in which the main characteristics of a star are present is a success. The number of the arms does not matter, but they must cross in the centre and give the effect of radiating out.

Length of Lines

AGE 5.—Test 1: Drive two ordinary $\frac{1}{4}$ in. screws into a solid piece of wood. Show the child how to take out one with a screwdriver. Then hand him the driver and ask him to remove the other screw.

SCORING. This is reckoned by the time it takes the child to get the screw right out. One minute is exceptionally good time for five-year-olds. Three minutes is an average time.

The result would greatly fortify the self-respect of our aunts, whose opinion of their own intelligence and good taste would be enhanced by reminders that the eminent are frequently deficient in both.

It would be far better if the calendar-mongers specialized, not in wisdom, but in folly. Folly is a commodity of which there is a far more inexhaustible and far more rapidly growing supply than there is of wisdom. Scarcely a day passes—none certainly has passed for more than a week—on which there is not made public some statement of an ineptitude so colossal as to merit immortality in one form or another. Calendar magnates should make it their business to collect the more memorable pages and incorporate them in their wares.

The result would greatly fortify the self-respect of our aunts, whose opinion of their own intelligence and good taste would be enhanced by reminders that the eminent are frequently deficient in both.

Asking one Back

WITH most ten-year-olds the simplest way to tackle any question is to ask one in reply. In this way you not only see exactly how the child's mind is working, but you also encourage it to think for itself.

For instance, if you are asked how something works your answer should be: "How do you think it works? Come and have a look!" Or if your child asks you why Peggy's mother tells her quite different things about babies you should say, "Which do you think are right—my answers, or hers?"

In the latter case you will at once see what the child is worrying about.

No money Troubles

FINANCIAL questions should be treated carefully. There is no harm in any child knowing its parents' income. There is every harm in the child worrying about money.

When the questions are social ones, divert that question and make the child think things out for itself. If you can, but there is no need to be too heavy or pompous. Few questions are quite sensible at times to confess that you don't know the answer yourself.

the memory for more than a week,

CALLING ALL CALENDARS

The calendar season has just been in full swing. We have all bought calendars to give to our aunts, and our uncles have bought calendars to give to us.

There are few signs of originality in this year's crop, which is as it should be. The perfunctory, the almost mechanical, nature of our reciprocal generosity would be ill served by the introduction of a disconcerting element of novelty.

It is, moreover, extremely difficult to be original with a calendar. Such experiments with time have been made in the past have not been popular. Interference with the established order of the months has, it is true, often passed unnoticed. In a country where there is too seldom climatic evidence available for those pedants who wish to discover whether they are living in January or June; but any tampering with the usual sequence of days is strongly resented.

The moral of many an aunt has been seriously impaired by the receipt of a calendar which led off with a month of Sundays; and the vaguest and most unobservant of women becomes the prey of painful suspensions when she finds herself dating her correspondence "March 46th."

The firms responsible for these frivolous innovations are now for the most part out of business.

There is however one feature of the calendar market where reform might well prove salutary. The "Thought for To-day" system needs gingering up. In theory, no doubt, it is a good thing to be confronted every morning with some fresh aphorism, epigram, or profundity. But in practice the confronter comes, after a time, to dislike these smug, Olympian intimations. Besides, the world's quotable stock of wisdom is preponderantly of a negative kind.

It consists very largely of warnings: "October 1st ('Phantom shooting begins'). Trust few men. 'Above all keep your follies to yourself.' Sir Walter Raleigh"—there is a note of asperity here which is unacceptable even to the mildest of aunts; yet the advice is too sensible to ignore, and the new year, calling to pay his respects, is treated with frigid suspicion. Thoreau may have said "Make the most of your regrets. To 'regret' deeply is to live afresh," and Dryden that "No Government has ever been, or ever can be, wherein time-servers and blockheads will not be uppermost"; but there is no reason why we—and far less why our aunts—should be reminded of their unexhilarating woe.

It would be far better if the calendar-mongers specialized, not in wisdom, but in folly. Folly is a commodity of which there is a far more inexhaustible and far more rapidly growing supply than there is of wisdom. Scarcely a day passes—none certainly has passed for more than a week—on which there is not made public some statement of an ineptitude so colossal as to merit immortality in one form or another. Calendar magnates should make it their business to collect the more memorable pages and incorporate them in their wares.

The result would greatly fortify the self-respect of our aunts, whose opinion of their own intelligence and good taste would be enhanced by reminders that the eminent are frequently deficient in both.

Spreading The "Gospel Of Imperialism"

ROYAL EMPIRE SOCIETY AND HONGKONG

On a tour through the Far East in order to "spread the gospel" of Imperialism, Lt. Col. S. P. Williams, C.I.E., Travelling Secretary of the famous Royal Empire Society, is in Hongkong.

Yesterday Lt. Col. Williams addressed local Rotarians and their guests. Last night, in a chat in his rooms at the Hongkong Hotel, he told me something about the objects and aims of the Society he represents.

The British Empire is, says Lt. Col. Williams, the one solid rock in the troubled seas of international politics, and he believes that world revival, prosperity, and safety depends at the moment on the solidity of the many links—Colonial and Dominion—that are the Empire. "Unity within the British Empire is essential to-day as it never has been before," Lt. Col. Williams told me. "It is the duty of every one of us to foster solidarity in the Empire. Unity is impossible without knowledge and mutual understanding."

"To provide a centre for discussion and the machinery for the dissemination of information throughout all the peoples of the Empire is the important contribution which the Royal Empire Society is making to this great aim."

"The Society is reorganising itself in order to develop to the utmost its scope and its activities.

NEW HEADQUARTERS

"The Royal Empire Society has grown out of the old Colonial Institute, which was founded in a couple of rooms in the Strand nearly seventy years ago. Just after I left London on my present tour it moved to its new buildings in Northumberland Avenue, which were opened by the present King.

"With the move into its new headquarters, the Society enters a new stage in its career. A Junior section has been started, and by stimulating the youth of the country to a consciousness of their Empire responsibilities, an important contribution will be made to the future of Empire unity.

"The Royal Empire Society arose out of the foresight and enthusiasm of a small cluster of Imperialists who determined to combat the theory then widely held that Great Britain would be much better off without her self-governing Colonies.

"Largely owing to the pioneer work of these men, the general attitude of the world towards the Empire has gradually changed. The view more generally held to-day is to think of the Empire as something of vital importance—as an influence in the cause of civilisation rather than as a mere conglomeration of territories."

OPENED BY KING

Lt. Col. Williams showed me photographs of the new headquarters of the Society in Northumberland Avenue. This building, opened by the King and Queen when they were the Duke and Duchess of York, is panelled throughout its public rooms with Empire timbers. The spacious dining room is panelled in Silky Yellow Canadian Birch, the gift of the Canadian Government; the General Lounge is panelled in Australian Blackwood, the gift of the Commonwealth of Australia; the Smoking Room is panelled in Western Red Cedar; the gift of the Government of British Columbia. The Library, largest of its type in the Empire, contains 250,000 volumes of Empire interest and includes a Reading Room where over 1,000 Empire newspapers and periodicals, including those published in Hongkong, can be read.

The five-storey building contains 55 bedrooms, and the dining room seats 350. There are several Lounges, Reading and Card Rooms, a Silence Room, Changing Rooms, and in addition, a Drawing Room and Rest Room for Ladies and Smoking and Billiard Rooms for men.

Non-Resident Fellows (i.e. resident outside Great Britain) may join the Society upon payment of an Entrance Fee of 21s and an Annual Subscription of 31s. 6d.

Lt. Col. Williams, incidentally, is accepting applications for membership, and may be seen by those interested at his rooms at the Hongkong Hotel. He will remain in Hongkong until December 22, when he is returning to London, via Japan and Canada.

FORMER RECTOR OF STIFFKEY ACCUSED

FORMERLY rector of Stiffkey, Harold Francis Davidson was remanded on bail at Westminster Police Court recently on a charge which his solicitor said "might seem simple but requires considerable attention."

He was charged with wilfully trespassing on, and refusing to quit, railway premises at Victoria Station.

When the case was called, Mr. G. Burton rose from the collectors' table and said: "I have only just been instructed, and there are several witnesses to call. It is impossible to do justice to the case this morning without a remand."

POLICE RAID DUELLISTS' DEN AS ONE FALLS

BY A LONDON REPORTER

BUDAPEST, Jan. 1.

STURDY, black-haired Dr. Franz Sargas was to-day in the middle of the third of the nine duels he is fighting to defend his wife's honour, when, just as he dealt his opponent a mighty sabre cut, cutting open his head, the police burst into the fencing school shouting "Stop!"

They had forced open the door and dashed in on us from behind—I was watching the fight.

The police took Dr. Sargas' name and that of his opponent, Dr. Edmer Losony, young Budapest Societe. The sabres were seized and the police warned the combatants that they would be prosecuted.

Dr. Losony had fainted from loss of blood. He was taken to hospital with a six-inch wound.

Stripped To Waist

I drove up to the fencing school behind Dr. Sargas' car. Dr. Losony was there. Both stripped to the waist, binding cloths around their throats. The sabres were of the heavy cavalry type. After the seconds' formal appeal to the adversaries to reconcile themselves, which was received in silence, the duel began.

At the cry "En garde" Dr. Sargas opened a whirlwind attack which soon taxed his opponent's superior fencing skill. The building rang with the hiss and clang of steel.

Dr. Sargas was obviously far more excited than his adversary. Then with a wild cry Dr. Sargas lunged, feinted, and then sliced his opponent's head open with a lightning blow.

"Honour Satisfied"

As he left the fencing school, nervous but smiling, Dr. Sargas said: "It was a nuisance that it was stopped like that. However, it was pretty decisive and I consider my honour satisfied."

"I must fight six more sabre duels yet. I shall find a quiet place out of town so we can get out there before the police track us."

When Dr. Sargas arrived home his pretty twenty-two-year-old blonde blue-eyed wife was awaiting him with tear-stained face. Before marriage she was Magda Darko, daughter of a millionaire Budapest banking family, and her elopement with Dr. Sarga led to the duels because friends said he had married her for money.

Treaty Signed in Blood

Washington, Dec. 25.

A TREATY signed with the blood of 10 men has been discovered in an unclaimed safety vault box in North Dakota.

It is the only Indian "blood treaty" known to exist.

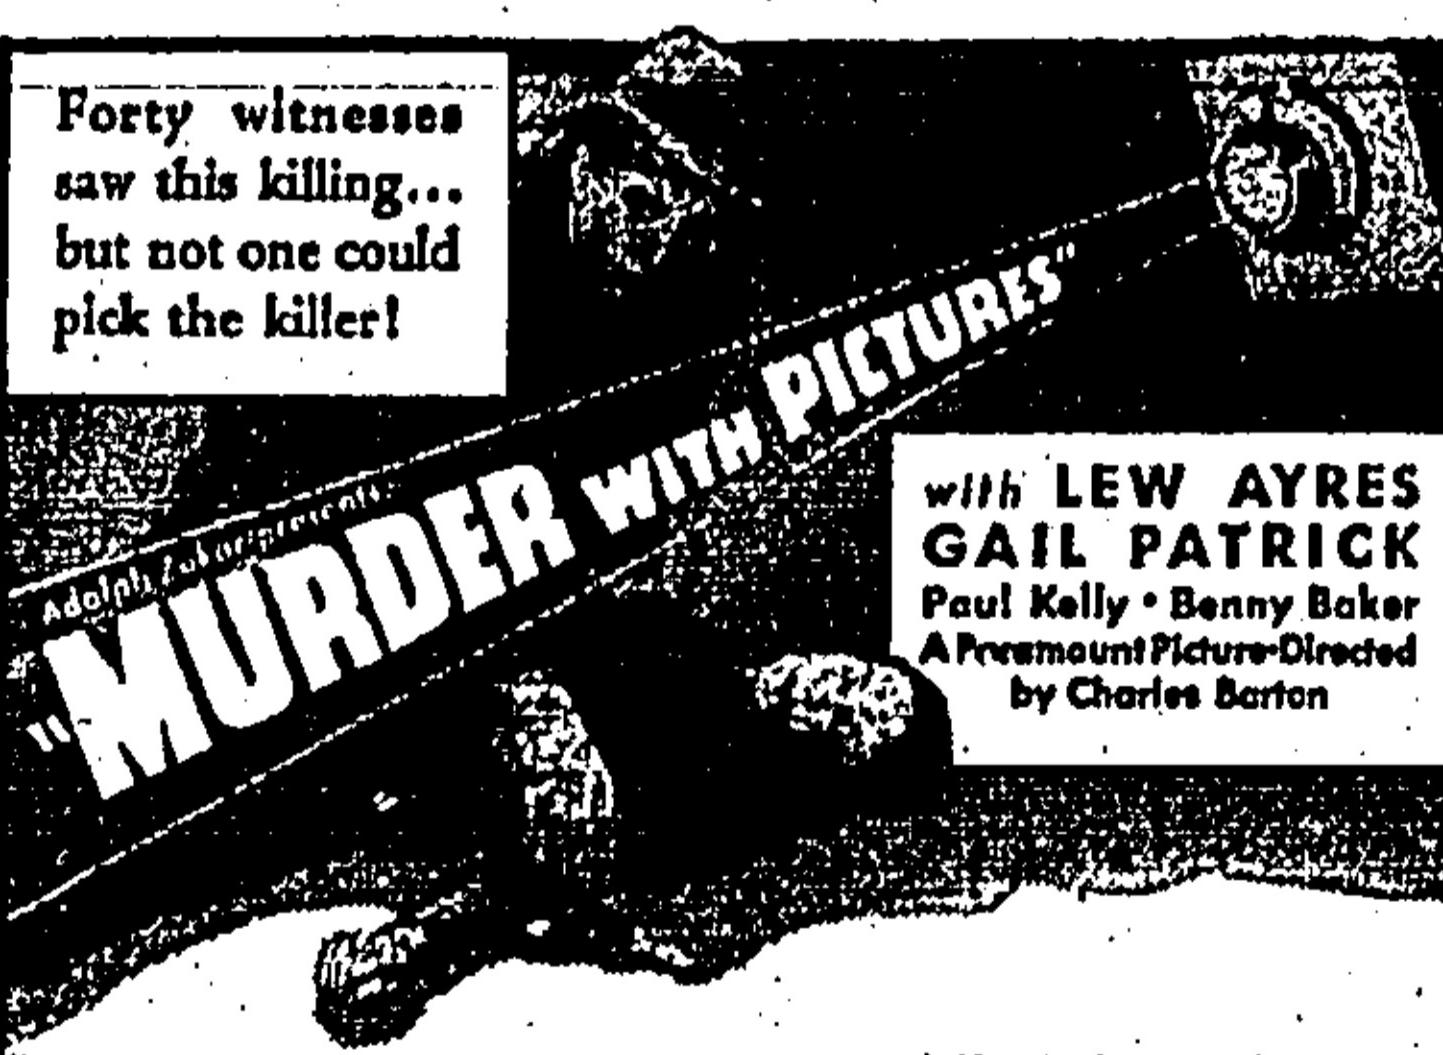

The treaty of "peace and friendship" drawn up in 1830, signed in their own blood by ten chiefs of the Sioux tribe, was made with three white men—who signed in ink.

BRITISH SHIP ABLAZE OFF PHILIPPINES Silver Cyprus Feared A Total Loss BUT PASSENGERS AND CREW ARE SAVED

ILOILO, P.I., JAN. 13.
FIRE, WHICH BROKE OUT IN THE GENERATOR SYSTEM OF THE 7,000-TON BRITISH MOTOR VESSEL, SILVER CYPRUS, SPREAD TO SUCH AN EXTENT AND WITH SUCH RAPIDITY THAT THE MASTER OF THE VESSEL DECIDED TO BEACH HIS COMMAND TO-DAY. THE SHIP IS BELIEVED TO BE A TOTAL LOSS.

Bound from New York to Manila, the Silver Cyprus carried a number of passengers. All are reported to be safe.

Her crew, too, is safe, ashore. Only her captain is still aboard the burning ship.

The vessel has been beached at Buena Vista, Guimaras, and the crew brought the passengers here this morning.

TOTAL LOSS

The ship is expected to be a total loss, says a message from Manila.

The fire broke out at 3 a.m. to-day and soon after the Silver Cyprus had left Iloilo, where she had arrived yesterday, with a cargo of fertiliser.

The fire was followed by a series of explosions in all three holds and it is stated that the fire is still raging.—Reuter.

ARREST IN PEIPING MYSTERY

DEVELOPMENT IN WERNER CASE

BLOOD-STAINED SHOES, KNIFE

Peking, Jan. 13.
The first arrest in connection with the brutal murder of Miss Pamela Werner, a 16-year-old adopted daughter of Mr. E. T. C. Werner, former British Consul at Foochow, whose mutilated body was discovered not far from her home on January 10, has been made.

The arrest was made last night by Captain Botham, who recently joined the British Police Force in Tientsin, and who has arrived here to conduct an investigation into the murder.

The nationality of the man detained is not stated, but it is alleged that blood-stained shoes, a dagger and a handkerchief were found in his house.—Reuter.

PATHOLOGIST AT WORK

Peking, Jan. 13.
An unidentified man has been taken into custody for questioning in the Pamela Werner murder case, following the discovery of a pair of blood-stained shoes, a dagger with a bloody sheath and portion of a blood-spattered handkerchief which were found in his home. No explanation for their presence there has been given up to now.

A pathologist is examining the discoveries to determine whether the stains are of human blood.—United Press.

EDEN PLEADS FOR RECONCILIATION

"PREFER BUTTER TO GUNS" BRITAIN OFFERS EVERY HELP TO SETTLE EUROPE

London, Jan. 12.
In a speech at a dinner of the Foreign Press Association in London to-night, the Foreign Secretary referred to Herr Hitler's statement yesterday in Berlin, at the reception of the Diplomatic Corps, and declared that His Majesty's Government warmly reciprocate the sentiments which the German Chancellor expressed regarding an understanding and reconciliation among nations.

"Surely the world is not so bankrupt that it can find no way of giving practical force to what it seems is the common aim of us all," said Mr. Eden. "That, at any rate, must be the task to which we must devote ourselves in the coming year, and, so far as the people of this country are concerned, I can assure you it is the task to which they will bend their most earnest and united endeavours." If that task were to be accomplished, both political and economic appeasement was necessary.

An allusion to the danger of economic distress to peace brought Mr. Eden to the question of re-armament. He said: "We in this country, as you know, are now engaged in re-armament on a considerable, indeed, a formidable scale. That re-armament is gathering momentum. In time it must impose a strain upon our national finances and national prosperity, as it is already doing elsewhere. Yet no other policy was open to us in a rapidly re-arming world. The British nation have no desire to spend money upon armaments, yet let there be no mistake. In existing conditions, they can, and if need be, will, show as stubborn a determination as any other nation in re-equipping, which they regard as vital to their national safety."

A BETTER WAY

"But that is not the road we wish to travel. There is a better way. We definitely prefer butter to guns, and we are prepared to do our best, by economic co-operation and by working for European appeasement, to secure that others have butter, too, in a world which has no need of guns."

Earlier in his speech, Mr. Eden spoke of the many disturbing and even menacing factors which they found in Europe at the opening of the New Year. There was the situation in Spain, regarding which the British views were well-known. He said: "We are a democratic country. We believe it is for the inhabitants of any country to decide what system of government they prefer. We wish to see imposed no system of government, either our own or any other, on the Spanish people. We believe any such effort would be unjustified, and, even were it to be successful, it would be unjustified. The latter boat was washed ashore empty, but eight of the men aboard succeeded in swimming ashore. The remainder, as well as the entire company in the other life-boat, was missing.

Four bodies have so far been washed ashore.

At the time of the disaster, the Joanna Thorden was completing her return maiden voyage from New York to Honolulu.—Reuter Special.

EARLIER MESSAGE

ON MYSTERIOUS PARIS MISSION

DR. HALMAR SCHACHT

FRANCO- GERMAN AMITY

RECENT TENSION FORGOTTEN SCHACHT TO VISIT PARIS

Berlin, Jan. 12.
There is further evidence of the ending of Franco-German tension in the report that Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, Minister of National Economy, intends to visit Paris shortly, and ostensibly to inspect the German section of the forthcoming Paris Exhibition.

However, business circles expect he will discuss Franco-German financial and economic problems while in Paris, and there are even rumors of a French loan to Germany, for the purpose of assisting her purchases of raw materials.—Reuter.

FRANCE GRATIFIED

Paris, Jan. 12.
The French Military Attaché at Tangier, Capt. Luiset, has been granted "safe conduct" to travel freely in Spanish Morocco, including Melilla and Ceuta, by Colonel Belgeder, acting High Commissioner of the territory.

This decision of the Spanish rebel authorities has given great satisfaction to France.—Reuter.

FACILITIES OFFERED

Tangier, Jan. 13.
Colonel Belgeder yesterday offered every facility to journalists, except Russians, to visit Spanish Morocco.—Reuter.

Paris, Jan. 12.
The French Ambassador to Germany, M. Francios-Ponce, has arrived here and conveyed to M. Yves Delbos, Foreign Minister, the desire of Herr Hitler that Dr. Hjalmar Schacht be invited to Paris. He also reported on the conversations in which Herr Hitler exchanged assurances regarding the integrity of Spanish and Moroccan soil.

The French Government is seemingly not eager to extend the invitation, despite the apparent importance of Herr Hitler's request, preferring that Germany first extend to France political guarantees, possibly in the form of negotiations for an arms limitation agreement.

All the British Army officers will resign, thus severing sixty-five years of British connection with Egypt. A new British Military Mission, however, is arriving shortly.—Reuter Special.

OUTLAWING COMMUNISM

Santiago, Jan. 12.
The Chilean Government's security Bill has been passed by the Senate by 22 votes to 18 and becomes law after signature by the President. The Bill follows the lines of measures introduced recent by other South American Governments with the object of outlawing Communism.

Lady in Wool

This outfit is smart... warm and you can get it for a fiver . . .

THIS time of year you have to plan your clothes twice over—once to be warm and once to be smart.

It's no good wearing a well-thought-out outfit and spoiling the whole effect by looking blue in the face and fingers. . . Just to prove you can look smart and at the same time keep out the east winds we've dressed this girl almost entirely in wool—underclothes and all.

The all-in cost (without cap and shoes, which we leave to you) is just what you want for this weather. Wolsey make the things.

Here's what she's wearing:

- Woollen suit
- Crepe de chine slip
- Wool panties and vest
- Stockings.

This is what it looks like

SUIT is closely woven, in raisin colour. Straight skirt, with one centre pleat, bringing the fulness to the front.

Jacket has four buttons, does up rather high, with narrow revers, small roll collar. This leaves a small V-shaped opening, so that under it you can wear a high shirt blouse, tuck in a scarf, or on warm days get away with one of those false fronts.

The two breast pockets are tied up with outsize bootlaces, made of same stuff as the suit. Strips running down from the pockets act as loops for the woollen belt.

How to keep its Shape

TREAT your woollen suit well and it'll stand by you. It helps to hang it at night on one of those special skirt hangers that grip its waist.

And if you line the skirt round the hips with a band of shantung or any thick silk, it

Other colours are navy and evergreen—good rich shades. Get a colour contrast with your hat and blouse. Light blue with the raisin . . . butter yellow with the navy . . . Indian red with the evergreen.

Hang of a suit depends a lot on what's worn underneath it. A silk slip keeps it from clinging. The one she's wearing is cut on the bias, fits smoothly and makes no wrinkles.

Don't be put off by the Sound

Now for the vest and panties. You may think woolen underclothes sound like your grandmother or remind you of those bulky garments you wore at school. But reassess yourself from the picture. Both vest and panties are ribbed to shape at the waist and they don't overlap. This avoids getting two thicknesses of wool anywhere—consequently no bulges.

One advantage of wool is that it's snugly—and warmth underneath means that you won't need too much weight in your suit.

Choose stockings for the suit in one of the new bracken shades, dull toned.

The ones here have an elastic thread woven into the tops to make them fit closely and keep ladders at bay.

You may keep a man waiting half an hour while he mentally curses you as the most selfish and inconsiderate woman he has ever met, but when you apologise profusely he will smile and say: "Don't worry about that, my dear, it's worth it. I would gladly wait an hour for you!"

If MEN Spoke the TRUTH . . .

By Hilda Lurcott

If men always spoke the truth to us, what an unromantic place this world would be!

Fortunately for our peace of mind, there are occasions when their innate chivalry makes them forget truth. Men have learnt to lie so charmingly and spontaneously that women are easily persuaded (for the time being) that they are speaking the truth; especially as women have a happy faculty for believing what they want to believe.

You may keep a man waiting half an hour while he mentally curses you as the most selfish and inconsiderate woman he has ever met, but when you apologise profusely he will smile and say: "Don't worry about that, my dear, it's worth it. I would gladly wait an hour for you!"

Tactful Partner

YOU make a hurried change into evening clothes, and after the first dance discover an unsightly hole in your stocking. Self-consciously you offer excuses for it, and your tactful partner exclaims gallantly: "Good gracious, why I never even noticed it," whereas it has probably irritated him ever since you met.

Even when you trip heavily over his feet and ruin his best dance step, he will murmur sweetly: "It was entirely my fault."

All those delightful little compliments that men whisper so charmingly are often far removed from verity, but how soothing they are to our eager ears!

What woman honestly believes she is anything approaching an angel, or has eyes like liquid violets, but we love to be told so sometimes.

That is where men are so clever; they know exactly how to infuse romance into a woman's life, and if it is by the murmuring of a few delicious, harmless lies—what does it matter?

Younger than Ever

HOW refreshing it is to be told over dinner: "Why, you're looking younger than ever to-night," after that nasty little barb from Mrs. Jones in the morning: "Oh, my dear, you do look tired! I am sure you need a change," which has rankled ever since.

All the men I have known have lied to me, and I am extremely grateful to them for it. Grateful for those romantic sentiments they have whispered to me, which have warmed my heart. Even if they were not strictly true they have at least relieved the hard monotony and created some very happy illusions.

I for Invalid

"THE principal thing about feeding invalids," declared Sarah, "is to give them something attractive to look at, and something different, if you can. Beef Tea and steamed fish are all very well, but what's the good of being ill if you can't have something really nice, just to tempt you?"

"I'm sure you're right, Sarah," I said. "Suppose you tell us one or two of those nice invalid dishes of yours?"

So here they are.

Steamed Chicken

CUT one side of the breast from a raw chicken, and skin it. Put it on a buttered plate, sprinkle over a little salt and cover with another plate. Put the plate over a pan of boiling water and let the water boil fast for about forty minutes.

If the chicken is not tender by then, steam it a little longer. Serve it with a little cooked spinach and with the juice it exuded poured round it.

CINEMA NOTES

The solution of a perfectly-planned murder by the all-seeing eye of the camera is the story behind the gripping mystery drama, "Murder with Pictures," starring Lew Ayres and Gail Patrick, which has its run at the Queen's Theatre to-day. Ernest Costart, a crooked lawyer, is killed in a room crowded with people. Suspicion points to every one present, including a number of newspaper photographers who came to take pictures, and beautiful Miss Patrick, who was heard to quarrel with the lawyer shortly before his death. The girl takes refuge in Ayres' apartment when the police begin their search for her. Paul Kelly, a reporter, gets hold of a plate taken by Benny Baker, a cub reporter, which he knows will reveal the identity of the slayer. When he begins to develop a print he too is murdered. Baker, in a distant city, has a print of the plate but doesn't realize its importance. But his editor does. It is placed on the new Wirephoto Service and broadcast to the world, revealing the slayer in the very act of murdering the lawyer.

"Bengal Tiger"

"Bengal Tiger," a Warner Bros. picture of actual circus life and people, comes to the King's Theatre to-day. It is said to be powerful in its realism and drama, yet simple and touching in its unusual romance, appealing to warm hearts everywhere. Packed with adventure and excitement as well as romance, it is the kind of drama that touches the heart cords of men, women and children alike. The setting in which most of the plot takes place, is a real circus, inside and outside the big top, the special train and winter quarters, the side shows and dressing tents. Much of the drama centres around the cages in which the wild animals are quartered, trained and exhibited. Real acrobats, aerialists, riders, clowns and animal trainers, famed in circus life, appear throughout the picture. Paul Dratz, famous German actor, plays the role of the assistant animal trainer who gave his own life to save his boss. Don Barclay, famous of the follies, has the part of a clown; Gordon Hart, the "boy" of the hospital, superintendents, Carlisle Moore, Jr., that of an ambulance driver, and Joseph King that of the owner of the circus. Louis King directed the picture from the story and screen play by Roy Chancellor and Earl Felton.

"Moscow Nights"

Harry Baur, the brilliant Continental film star, whose first appearance in a British film created a sensation, besides the aura of genius which surrounds his every movement on the screen, has acquired for himself a reputation in the studio for realism. In "Moscow Nights," now at the Majestic Theatre, he appears as Brilouikow, a gruff old peasant turned war contractor whose worship of the beautiful young Natasha provides a main theme of the story. "Moscow Nights" is responsible for bringing to the screen three players who, it is anticipated, by their magnificent performances will reach the heights of stardom. Harry Baur gives a performance which sweeps across the screen with power and virility; Penelope Dudley Ward more than fulfills the promise she showed in her first film—"Escape Me Never"—and Laurence Olivier, for the first time, has a role worthy of his talents. Scenes probably unparalleled in their brilliance and dramatic intensity have been created by Anthony Asquith, and include a colossal ballroom spectacle, vicing in realism with the Court Martial scene which provides the dramatic climax to the film.

Death Rather Than Defeat

New York, Dec. 28.
GANGS of workmen watched from a distance two buck deer fighting on a narrow granite ledge above the Royal Gorge, near Canon City, Colorado.

The bucks maneuvered silently for an hour, then charged. Their antlers locked, their footing finally gave away, and they plunged together over a 400-foot precipice into the Arkansas River.

TALKED 2 WEEKS NON-STOP

Memphis (Tennessee), Dec. 21.
A NURSE entered the room of Emmie Wilson, a four-year-old boy in the hospital here, this morning. She asked: "How are you?" The boy did not answer.

Said the nurse, "That's fine. When did you get better?" Still no answer.

"Wonderful!" said the nurse, as she ran to call the doctor. They agreed. "Marvelous!" they said.

Emmie had been stricken for two weeks with a rare form of encephalitis, which kept him chattering constantly. He just couldn't stop talking. Now that he is cured he is so happy he won't talk.

"My Illness Was A Godsend"

—JESSIE MATTHEWS

By A Correspondent
GLAMOROUS Jessie Matthews, back at work in the studios after a serious illness that lasted nearly four months, thought only a week or two ago that her screen career was ended.

Actors and actresses, technicians, cameramen and carpenters had enthusiastically welcomed her back to the set at Shepherd's Bush Studios, where, writes a London representative, I saw her at work.

"One consoling thought," she told me, "is that my nervous breakdown has been, in one peculiar way, a godsend. It has done me a power of good. I feel terribly calm at all times without losing any of my naturally high spirits."

"I think it would do wonders to lots of actors and actresses to have a nervous breakdown if the aftermath affected them as it has me."

"Yet only a week or two ago I thought my career as an actress was over. It nearly broke my heart to think that I would never see a film studio again."

HOLIDAY IN THE SUN

It is really within the last fortnight that I feel all my courage returning. I took plenty of exercise and spent the time gambolling about."

Jessie is only going back to work for a few days in order to finish the film, "Head Over Heels." After that she is going away for a couple of months in the sun.

"My husband, Sonnie Hale, and I propose going on a trip to Rio de Janeiro," she said. "We may hop off at different places on the route, but I intend to make it the holiday of my life."

U.S. COMBED FOR VANISHED BRITON

New York, Dec. 31.

TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND circulars are being distributed throughout the United States by the New York Missing Persons Bureau in an effort to solve one of the most puzzling mysteries of recent years—the five weeks' disappearance of Mr. Frederick B. Lloyd, president of the £500,000 Petroleum Conversion Corporation, and a Walton-on-the-Hill, Surrey, householder.

It was on October 22 that Mr. Lloyd, who is a British subject, aged 63, had luncheon with his lawyer, Mr. Arthur Rinke, and went with him by cab to the corporation's New York offices.

When Mr. Rinke alighted, Mr. Lloyd stayed in the cab and said he would return to his hotel, the Savoy Plaza. He did not arrive and has not been seen since.

Police scout the idea of kidnapping because no ransom demand has been received by Mrs. Lloyd.

His business and personal affairs were in perfect order. He had £15,000 in the bank.

The police declare they have his passport, thus precluding any likelihood that he intended to sail for England.

Mrs. Lloyd believes her husband to be suffering from loss of memory. They had been happily married for 30 years.

According to his doctors, Mr. Lloyd was suffering from high blood pressure, but he had fully recovered from a stroke three years ago.

LIONS ROAM IN HAWAII'S EXTINCT VOLCANO CRATER

Honolulu, T.H. Jan. 1.

Historic Diamond Head, towering extinct volcano, crater and Hawaii's most widely known landmark, has become "lion country".

Jim Wahl, radio broadcaster, started the "hun" with reports he had seen a lion while horseback riding along Diamond Head trails.

Someone recalled that "Kelli", a mascot on the U.S.S. Monterey, leaped overboard and escaped in January, 1935, and one theory is that he may have swum ashore and made his home in the area. Kelli, a puma, answered the description of Wahl's lion.

The "Affectionate General's" Story

GENERAL MILLAN ASTRAY, a Spanish rebel leader in Salamanca, has told the most blood-curdling "atrocity" story. "The Reds," he said, "cut off the ears of one of our aviators and a woman ate one of them in front of him."

General Astray wants to be known as the "affectionate general."

MRS. FREER SAILS AWAY AGAIN

Sydney, Dec. 28.

MRS. M. M. Freer—the Englishwoman who was refused permission to land in Australia month ago—arrived here in the s.s. Awatah to-day, but this evening was on her way back to New Zealand.

From her cabin she said: "I'm feeling very well—and here I am again, because I never say die."

While she spoke, however, the Federal High Court was dismissing an application for a writ of habeas corpus to decide whether it could set aside the decision of the Minister of the Interior, Mr. T. Paterson, refusing Mrs. Freer permission to land.

REFUSED TEST

It was stated in court that Mrs. Freer when given a dilation test in Italian at Fremantle put her index fingers in her ears. Failure to pass the test meant she could be refused entry to Australia.

Mr. Justice Evatt ruled that failure to hear the test meant failure to pass it. The court was not authorised to inquire whether a person was a proper person to land in Australia. It had no authority to set aside the decision of a Minister, even if his ruling were wrong.

The refusal of the application did not endorse or confirm any decision by the executive.

Mrs. Freer, whom Mr. Paterson had said was entangled with an Australian Army officer, and was a "heartless adventuress usurping a wife's place," has strenuously denied the allegations.

She had been in New Zealand since her entry to Australia was refused.

Chimes Go Round The World

Canberra now regularly hears the bells of Westminster Abbey calling it to Church every Sunday morning and evening, although no Church there yet possesses a peal.

A gramophone record of the bells was recently broadcast through a very powerful amplifier from the tower of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. It was so successful, says Austral News, that it has now been decided to make it an established practice, and three amplifiers are shortly to be installed instead of one.

succeed, could bring no lasting peace. For that reason, we have discouraged any foreign intervention. Now, some believe, as the outcome of the civil war, that Spain inevitably must have Government either Fascist or Communist. That is not our belief. On the contrary, we believe that neither of those forms of government being indigenous to Spain, neither is likely to endure. Spain will in time evolve her own Spanish form of government. The less foreigners interfere the shorter that time will be."

DEMOCRACY NEEDED

The Foreign Secretary thought he discerned signs that the tendency to divide Europe into rival ideologies—a tendency against which the whole moral and political weight of the British people, and, he believed, all the English-speaking world, would be thrown—was diminishing, and he claimed that the recent joint British and Italian declaration regarding the Mediterranean, which was directed against no other country, was a contribution to that process.

A considerable part of Mr. Eden's speech was devoted to a spirited defence of democracy as a practical and effective system of government, to which the British people found it unnecessary to make a great parade of their devotion but which they would be ready to make all necessary sacrifice to preserve. Mr. Eden said: "Democracy is a slow and steady growth to which men of all sorts and conditions throughout many generations have made their contribution. We are told it is not heroic and that Europe is now entering on a heroic age. By all means let us have regard for Europe as a land for heroes to live in, not merely to die in. Let us not confuse heroism and heroics. Let us seek that quiet heroism which is none the less real because we can see qualities of heroism and willingness for self-sacrifice in people of every race and creed, and which regards co-operation with all races and creeds as essential to the general welfare of the world."

CO-OPERATION PLEA

In conclusion, the Foreign Secretary made an appeal for recognition of the independence of nations. He said: "By an increase of international understanding, by free co-operation between peoples, by the reduction of barriers, hampering international trade and intercourse, by a genuine attempt to restrain our sentiments, however 'deep' and strong they may be in favour of this or that ideology, we can better the international situation and increase the world's prosperity and happiness. On the other hand, if we withdraw within ourselves and increase our individual isolation, if we continue to pile up armaments to the utmost of our economic strength and beyond it, we shall perpetuate the evils from which we suffer to-day and bring the world nearer to even a greater disaster than that from which it is only just beginning to recover. There may have been a time when the nations could be independent and self-sufficient, but that day is long past. No other nation to-day can prosper on the ruin of another. If we base our policies on this fundamental fact, we shall have gone far to find a solution of the seemingly insoluble problems confronting mankind."—British Wireless.

DISCERNING MENCHOOSE SPEY ROYAL

Hearing Concludes Abruptly

PLAINTIFF FAILS: OTHER NON-SUITED

A case set down for hearing this morning before the Justice Judge, Mr. Justice J. J. Hayden, finished abruptly after half an hour when the claim brought by one plaintiff was dismissed and the other plaintiff was non-suited. His Lordship granted liberty to bring a fresh action.

The case was one in which Ha Kim and the Hongkong Coal Workers' Association, of No. 131, Johnston Road, claimed damages from Kwok On, of the Bank of Indo Chino (Compradores) Department, on the ground of improper and irregular restraint of their goods on September 10 and 21 last.

Mr. J. M. D'Almada Remedios represented plaintiffs and Mr. G. S. Hugh Jones, of Messrs. Wilkinson and Grist, appeared for defendants.

Mr. Remedios said a restraint was originally issued by defendants against Ha Kim, but by agreement between himself and Mr. Hugh Jones, that restraint was dropped and another was issued against the Association. Ha Kim was only chairman of the Association and was not responsible to the landlord. Defendants were owners of No. 131, Johnston Road, of which Hip Yee was principal tenant and the Association were sub-tenants. When the question of the restraint came before Mr. Justice J. A. Fraser, he held that the restraint was improperly levied against the Association and it was therefore withdrawn.

The damages claimed amounted to $413, made up as follows: 55 members who refused to pay their monthly subscription of 40 cents during the period referred to; 500 coolies who, between September 12 and October 10 had refused to pay their three cents commission, one cent of which was due to the "funeral" fund and two cents to the Association; 12 superintendents of coolies who had refused to pay their five cents during the same period when the balliffs were in charge of the premises.

NOT AN ENTITY

Mr. Hugh Jones pointed out that the Association was not an entity in law. Even a partnership could not sue under its partnership name except under the special rules provided for it—and then only if it was a partnership carrying on business for profit. Apart from whether this Association was for profit—and therefore illegal because of the number of its members—it could not institute proceedings under its name.

Mr. Remedios said it would appear that no social club could seek relief in the Courts at that rate.

His Lordship: The members could all sue together.

Mr. Hugh Jones: What I should do would be to take out the will in the names of one or two members and ask permission to sue on behalf of all the members.

His Lordship upheld Mr. Hugh Jones's submission and granted Mr. Remedios leave to strike out the name of the Association and amend the writ.

Mr. Remedios asked that the writ be amended to read: "Plaintiff, Ha Kim, Chairman of the Hongkong Coal Workers' Association suing for himself and members." He further asked for an adjournment.

Mr. Hugh Jones objected to the amendment as it would mean that if Ha Kim were suing for himself and the other members, he would be suing for damages suffered by the Association, whereas, under the present writ, he was clearly shown to be suing for damages suffered by himself. This would be completely substituting one action for another. Furthermore, in his opening Mr. Remedios had not mentioned Ha Kim's damages and he, Mr. Hugh Jones, suggested that the best course to pursue would be to withdraw Ha Kim's claim. The claim against the Association was already dismissed. If plaintiffs wanted to bring another action later, they could do so.

His Lordship dismissed the case brought by Ha Kim, non-suited the Association as second plaintiffs, and ordered that the costs of the hearing be borne by the plaintiffs.

768 DEAD OF INFLUENZA IN LARGE TOWNS OF BRITAIN

London, Jan. 12. The influenza epidemic has accounted for 768 deaths throughout the large towns in Great Britain during the week ended January 9. This figure compares with 523 in the previous week.

There have been 558 deaths reported in the south-eastern area, including London.

An inquiry by the Minister of Health shows that the epidemic extends from the south to the north. The outbreak is widespread and highly infectious, but the cases reported are mostly of a mild character, most of the deaths being among elderly people.—Reuter Special.

According to a British Wireless message, the Ministry of Health warns the public to continue precautions which experience has shown desirable, as it is too early yet to say whether the epidemic has reached its peak.

WOULD EFFECT ECONOMIES

Washington, Jan. 12.

President F. D. Roosevelt has recommended to Congress the thorough reorganization of the Government's administrative machinery, including the creation of two new Cabinet posts, namely, a Secretary of Social Welfare and a Secretary of Public Works.

He has also asked for six executive assistants to the President, whose duties will be to relieve the President of great volume of detailed work.

President Roosevelt also recommends the grouping together of 105 independent federal agencies under appropriate departments, and the extension of the civil service to include 250,000 Government servants.

It is estimated that the reorganization will effect economies amounting to $30,000,000 annually.—Reuter.

UNLIMITED POWER

Washington, Jan. 12. President Roosevelt, in a special message to Congress to-day, asks for almost unlimited power to effect the most complete reorganization of the federal executive branches in the history of the nation.

He asks the right to combine over 100 different agencies in twelve major departments, directly controlled from the White House.

His message, consisting of five brief points, provides for an unprecedented degree of presidential executive management.—United Press.

Spreading The "Gospel Of Imperialism"

ROYAL EMPIRE SOCIETY AND HONGKONG

On a tour through the Far East in order to "spread the gospel" of Imperialism, Lt. Col. S. P. Williams, C.I.E., Travelling Secretary of the famous Royal Empire Society, is in Hongkong.

Yesterday Lt. Col. Williams addressed local Rotarians and their guests. Last night, in a chat in his rooms at the Hongkong Hotel, he told me something about the objects and aims of the Society he represents.

The British Empire, says Lt. Col. Williams, the one solid rock in the troubled seas of international politics, and he believes that world revival, prosperity and safety depend at the moment on the solidity of the many links—Colonial and Dominion—that are that Empire.

"Unity within the British Empire is essential to-day as it never has been before," Lt. Col. Williams told me. "It is the duty of every one of us to foster solidarity in the Empire. Unity is impossible without knowledge and mutual understanding."

"The Society is reorganising itself in order to develop to the utmost its scope and its activities."

NEW HEADQUARTERS

"The Royal Empire Society has grown out of the old Colonial Institute, which was founded in a couple of rooms in the Strand nearly seventy years ago. Just after I left London on my present tour it moved to its new buildings in Northumberland Avenue, which were opened by the present King."

"With the move into its new headquarters, the Society enters a new stage in its career. A Junior section has been started, and by stimulating the youth of the country to a consciousness of their Empire responsibilities, an important contribution will be made to the future of Empire unity."

"The Royal Empire Society arose out of the foresight and enthusiasm of a small cluster of Imperialists who determined to combat the theory then widely held that Great Britain would be much better off without her self-governing Colonies."

"Largely owing to the pioneer work of these men, the general attitude of the world towards the Empire has gradually changed. The view more generally held to-day is to think of the Empire as something of vital importance—as an influence in the cause of civilization rather than as a mere conglomeration of territories."

OPENED BY KING

Lt. Col. Williams showed me photographs of the new headquarters of the Society in Northumberland Avenue. This building, opened by the King and Queen when they were the Duke and Duchess of York, is panelled throughout its public rooms with Empire timbers. The spacious dining room is panelled in Silky Yellow Canadian Birch, the gift of the Canadian Government; the General Lounge is panelled in Australian Blackwood, the gift of the Commonwealth of Australia; the Smoking Room is panelled in Western Red Cedar, the gift of the Government of British Columbia. The Library, largest of its type in the Empire, contains 250,000 volumes of Empire interest and includes a Reading Room where over 1,000 Empire newspapers and periodicals, including those published in Hongkong, can be read.

The five-storey building contains 55 bedrooms, and the dining room seats 350. There are several Lounges, Reading and Card Rooms, and, in addition, a Drawing Room and Rest Room for Ladies and Smoking and Billiard Rooms for men.

Non-Resident Fellows (i.e. residents outside Great Britain) may join the Society upon payment of an Entrance Fee of 2*s* and an Annual Subscription of 3*s*.d.

Lt. Col. Williams, incidentally, is accepting applications for membership, and may be seen by those interested at his Room at the Hongkong Hotel. He will remain in Hongkong until December 22, when he is returning to London, via Japan and Canada.

PROBABLE NUCLEUS OF COLONY INTERPORT FOOTBALL TEAM

SELECTION COMMITTEE'S POLICY IN CHOOSING THE SIDE

QUIETLY, but determinedly, the Interport Selection Committee is getting on with the hundred and one details connected with the satisfactory arranging of the football Interport against Shanghai which takes place next month. Meetings are being constantly held and now points dealt with and settled. The public knows little of this side of the committee's work, and it is not the sort of thing one hears talked about. More direct is the interest the public has in (a) the policy the committee is adopting in the matter of finding a suitable team to represent the Colony and (b) the eventual personnel of the team. It is not easy to obtain enlightenment on either point, but I have been able to ascertain certain probabilities.

Contrasting Policies

So far as policy is concerned, the Selection Committee intends to more or less follow precedent and tradition. This is rendered more than ordinarily interesting by the fact that Shanghai has embarked upon an entirely new procedure. Shanghai has thrown overboard the old methods, and instead of haphazardly selecting trial teams of whom usually only about five per cent ever figure in the final Interport side, they have firstly classed players discovering whether they will be available to make the trip. Of course in Hongkong's case this is not necessary—at least for this season. Having secured this information they have chosen some 17 players and nominated them as more or less definite members of the Selection Committee over this squad. They are not fixing trial matches; that is in the usual sense of the term. They are putting various combinations drawn from these 17 against Shanghai's league teams, thus fulfilling the dual purpose of discovering the strongest team, and at the same time giving the players opportunities of getting acquainted and of formulating tactics and plans. All this appears to be highly commendable and preferable, I think, to the time-worn and haphazard methods which have hitherto featured the work of selection committees both here and in Shanghai.

Hongkong's Policy

HONGKONG has a much less defined policy. So far as I can make out only one trial match will be played. Perhaps that's a good thing. But various representative games have been already played this season, and will be during the next fortnight, regarded as "official" trials. In other words players who take part in the Kotewall Cup and Governor's Cup matches can regard themselves as possible Interport candidates. This, presumably, will enable the selectors to shoo up on current form. After this two teams—the good old Probables and Possibles—will be chosen for a final try-out, and from that point the eventual team to represent the Colony will walk straight on to the field for the Interport. I am not going to draw comparisons between this system and that of Shanghai's, because in any case the associations are in somewhat different positions. Whereas it is imperative for Shanghai to get together its team as early as possible as they have to travel down to Hongkong, the Colony can afford to wait a bit, as they have all necessary talent on the spot. It's a big difference. Whether am I going to criticise Hongkong's methods, for it is possible they will produce just as good results as any alternative—though there may be sound reason to doubt this. What it boils down to is that the selectors are expected to pick the best team available, and if they cannot do it after watching a New Year's Day representative match, two Kotewall Cup games, a Governor's Cup encounter and a full-dress trial—then they have good cause to expect complaints.

To Play Or Not

To Play?

BUT my own conviction is that we could field at least two alternative eleven capable of holding their own, our own ground, and because of this the selection committee is greatly assisted. In this case, however, we should like to see the best team turn out and I know the committee is going to leave no stone unturned to accomplish this. One question—and it is by no means settled—is whether Colony league players who are Canton residents, will be included. I have it on good authority that the committee would prefer not to include them if it is possible to find a team strong enough to represent Hongkong without them. That is a welcome indication that the Association is at least partially cognisant of certain ethical obligations attached to the observance of the Interport competition rules, even if it is only half a gesture. They would be far better advised to forget all about their Canton players, and then straighten out this irritating tangle of impracticable rules between the end of the season and the next Interport. In any case only two players are likely to be affected, and I don't think anyone would argue that their places cannot be fairly adequately filled by resident players. Let the good old adage "Honesty is the best policy" be the guiding principle with the Selection Committee over this matter.

These Are Ear-Marked

SPECULATION as to the composition of the Interport is now becoming rife. I have good reason to believe that among others who are ear-marked for inclusion are Rowlands, A. V. Gosano, Beltrao, Lee Wai-tong, Wilson, and Blackford. This six, I believe, will form the nucleus of the team no matter what the unofficial and official trials reveal. There is the question of another full back, two wing halves and a right wing. I believe either Dave Leonard or Lal Shul-wing (if the Canton players are excluded) will play at inside right. Irwin is a definite possibility for the right wing, but I haven't heard the name of Tang Kwong-sum or Fowler mentioned. As to the left wing, though Blackford is said to be a certainty, I have an idea selectors will be asked to watch the Chinese left winger in the Governor's Cup. One also wonders whether Harilagan is in the position of being "out of sight, out of mind." The wing halves will probably be most difficult to select. North's inclusion in the Governor's Cup team (and as captain at that) gives a broad hint about the right half berth, and selection would appear to rest between him and Leung Wing-chui. Leo Kwok-wai may seem to be an obvious choice for the other flank, yet I know competent critics doubt his ability to last for 90 minutes, despite his polished technique. Bliss is apparently regarded as a possible, but I wonder if the selectors have given thought to Evans and Taylor of the Fusiliers. Both seem to have claims, especially the first named, who is a first-class intermediet. If neither Li Tin-sang nor Tom Kong-pak are going to be considered, I suggest that it might be worth while trying Pickering at right back and Gosano at left. Stevens is left back in the Governor's Cup team, but I think Pickering is a superior defender in his position of right back, while Gosano can play in either place with equal facility. But come what may, there can be no doubt that Hongkong has a wealth of talent at its disposal, and it is hard to imagine the Colony turning out a losing team on February 11.

Many amateurs and professionals resent this interference with their liberty.—Reuter.

GORDON RICHARDS' NEW RECORD

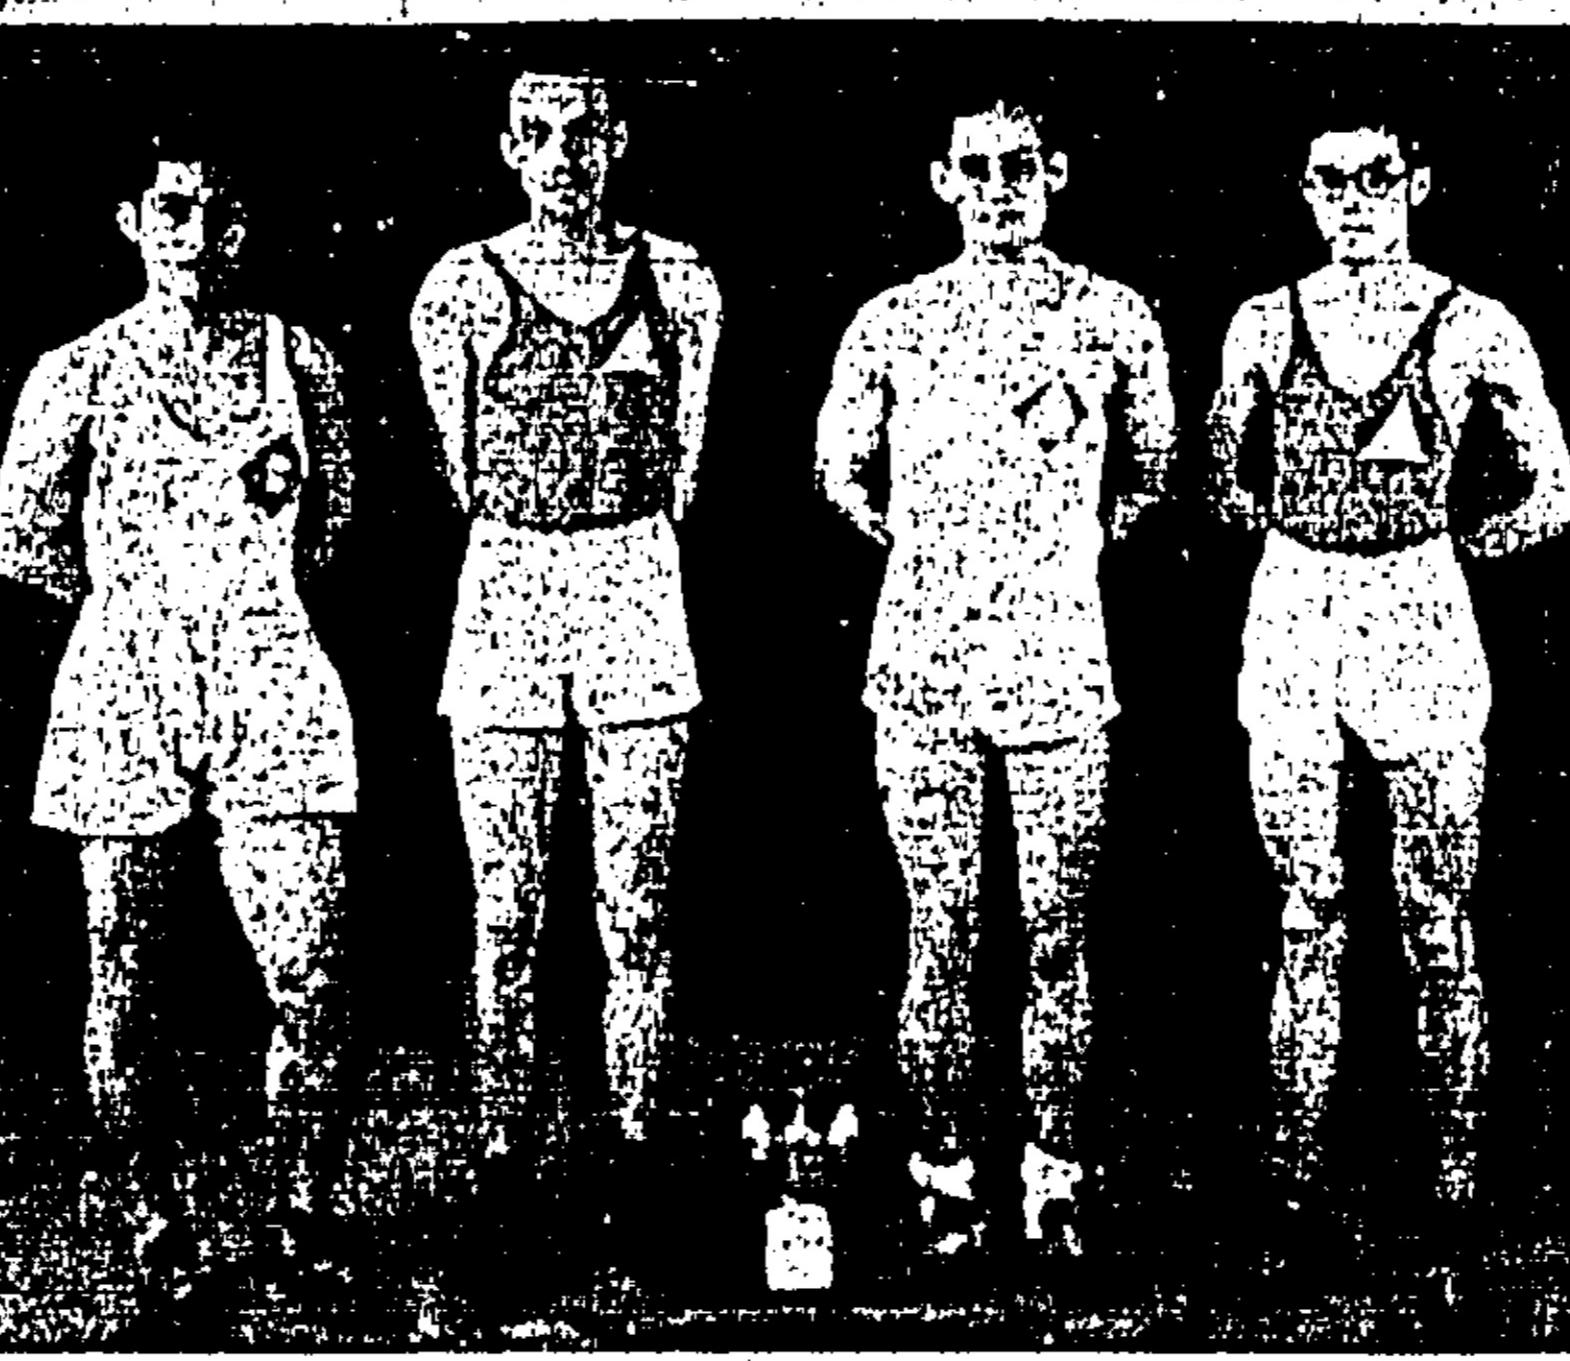

Thousand Mounts Ridden During Past Season

Gordon Richards, ten times champion jockey, has broken another record by riding in 1,000 races during the last season.

This is the first time that such a figure has been reached. The most Fred Archer rode in a single season was 607 in 1885, the year he broke the record with 346 winners.

Richards, who holds also the record of 12 consecutive winners, has only one more record to break. He has now ridden 2,011 winners in his 10 years on the Turf. Archer won 2,748 races. Richards has a good chance of breaking that record in 1940.

F. A.'s "Either Play Or Drop Out Of The First Division"

EFFECT OF FLEET'S DEPARTURE

MEMBERS of the League Management Committee of the Hongkong Football Association listened with something approaching amazement to a letter received from the Royal Navy at their meeting on Monday evening.

The letter requested permission for the Navy to postpone all first division league matches from January 12 to March 13 as the Fleet would be absent from the Colony.

Having recovered from their astonishment the committee politely, but firmly, replied "Nothing Doing."

The letter, which was terse and to the point, firstly asked that two senior division players—Wride and Le Page—receive permission to be relegated to the junior team, and secondly that the first division team's fixtures between January 12 and March 13 be cancelled until a later date as the Fleet is leaving Hongkong and would not be returning until March.

Due consideration was given to both requests, and the following decisions reached.

That the two senior players be permitted to transfer to the junior team.

That the Royal Navy either field a team to play their first division fixtures according to schedule, or withdraw from that league.

It is not yet known which alternative the Navy will choose.

ASSOCIATION ACTS CORRECTLY

Commenting on the question, "Veritas" writes:

While one can easily and naturally sympathise with the Navy inasmuch as that they have this week lost the major part of the first eleven, the action of the Football Association must be commended. To permit the Rugby to cancel all fixtures for the next two months would create a chaotic state in the first division programme never before experienced and sufficient to ruin completely the whole league.

Already officials are wondering whether it will be possible to fulfil the season's schedule—at least in anything like the proper time, and any more serious dislocation of the programme would make impossible a satisfactory completion of the football season.

There is no record of an Irishman having been sent off in an important club game.

Even now the league is well behind its schedule, and the Navy are among

One hopes most sincerely that the Navy will be led to accept the position and to do their utmost to turn out senior division team. The last thing wanted is the withdrawal of the Senior Service from the first division, for their contribution to the advance of good football in Hongkong has always been considerable. And if it were possible one would be happy to see the Navy accommodated in their request. But the results are too obvious to permit of such a thing, and the alternative of the Football Association is therefore made untenable.

One intriguing position arises. The F.A. has given permission for two senior players to be relegated to the junior division, which takes effect forthwith. Therefore, if the Navy choose to accept the Association's first alternative—to field a first division team—presumably these players will be required. Presumably in such an event the Navy will have to make further application for their reinstatement as senior players.

SHANGHAI'S INTERPORT HOCKEY TROUBLES

Shanghai, Jan. 12. The final selections for the Shanghai Ladies Hockey Association interport team will be made on Sunday next, when the fourteen remaining players, most of whom have played in four trials, will be tried against a fairly strong men's side made up of Army players.

Miss D. Bloomfield, who had not originally tried for a place, showed up so well last Sunday that she has been invited to appear as a candidate. Her position is left wing forward. The other forwards are: Lott Schmidt, M. Williams, Mary Sheldon, Mary Mallinovsky, and Jean May.

In the half-back line are: Elsie Little, Pilgrim, Nora Kelly and Winnie Ambrose. Miss Evelyn Vicat dropping out due to illness. Esther Biscoff and Frances Homick will fill the positions of right and left fullback respectively.

The two goalkeepers, Barbara Dunlap and Laura Carlton, have both shown good form in the trials, the former possibly being a little faster on her feet. The latter, however, has had considerably more experience.

It seems quite possible that Shanghai will turn out their strongest side to date. It only remains for the final selections to be made, and the players to continue their training under the capable guidance of Captain W. G. Clarke, during the four weeks remaining before the team hopes to sail for Hongkong.

The only obstacle remaining in the way of the trip is the financial one. In this connection, the association last year had to bear the burden of expense when they entertained the Hongkong women's side, without having the opportunity of making the profit they had anticipated on their interport fixtures.

Comments greatly with the success financial and otherwise, of the interport match itself.

Thus, in spite of all efforts which have been made since early this season, is down with scarlet fever, which means that he will not be able to play against Hongkong, who will be arriving in Shanghai on February 10 and meeting the 1st XV of the Club on February 11. In the annual interport match, Kennedy's illness is not the only piece of bad news. I. M. Macrae, who led the pack in both the Melville matches and is also a newcomer to Shanghai this season is ill. He is reported to have some kind of fever. Let us hope it does not prove to be scarlet fever too.

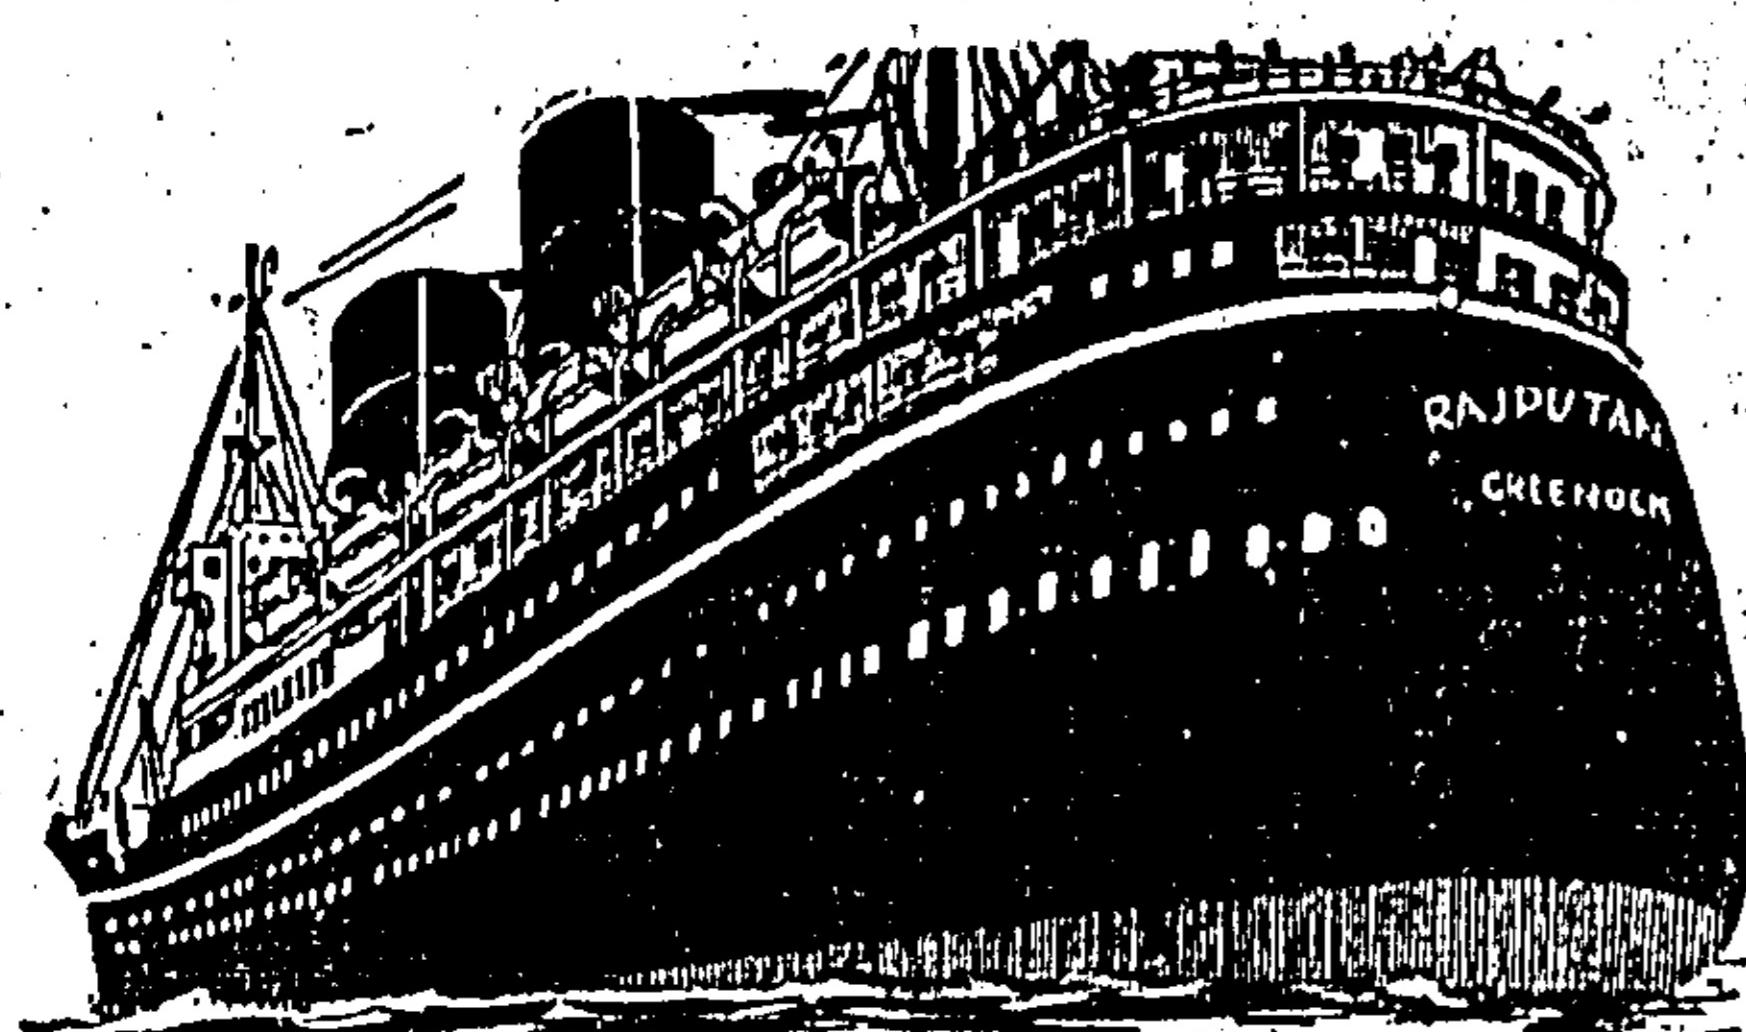

Shanghai And The Rugby Interport

VALUED PLAYERS ARE LOST

Rugby activities, after a lapse over the New Year holidays, have resumed in Shanghai, but with depleted ranks, particularly among members of the 1st XV. In the first place the Selectors will have to find someone to fill the gap caused by the tragic death of E. M. Slater. Slater was undoubtedly the Rugby "find" of the year and to replace his talents will be impossible.

Gaps have also occurred among the forwards. A. M. Kennedy, who has been playing regularly for the 1st XV since his arrival at the beginning of the season, is down with scarlet fever, which means that he will not be able to play against Hongkong, who will be arriving in Shanghai on February 10 and meeting the 1st XV of the Club on February 11. In the annual interport match, Kennedy's illness is not the only piece of bad news.

I. M. Macrae, who led the pack in both the Melville matches and is also a newcomer to Shanghai this season is ill. He is reported to have some kind of fever. Let us hope it does not prove to be scarlet fever too.

NO LICENCES FOR POISON

FINED

Ko Chut-hing, of the World Drug Company, was summoned before Mr. J. A. Fraser at the Central Magistracy this morning, on four counts of possession of poison without a licence.

Mr. D. McCallum, appeared on behalf of defendant, and pleaded guilty to the four counts. The summonses were (1) possession of 7 lbs. of carbolic acid; (2) possession of an admixture or preparation of poisonous alkaloid bearing the trade name of Vegetable Laxative; (3) possession of ephedrine, bearing the trade names of Ephedrine Inhalant, Ephreux, Ephraoul and Itubane; and (4) possession of Ergot bearing the trade name of Ergoaprol.

Mr. M. J. Abbott, the Acting Crown Solicitor, appeared for the prosecution, assisted by Mr. R. E. Cable, apothecary in the Medical Department.

Mr. McCallum said the batch of cases in which firms were summoned for possession of poison, which came before Mr. W. Schofield at the Magistracy last week, were the first for a long period of time, it not the first under the Ordinance, and, quite rightly, counsel observed, it was the policy of the Government to stop the sale of these proprietary articles which contain poison. They had been widely advertised and widely sold, but, in some cases, there was not the slightest indication to show that they were poison. This was so in the case of Ephedrol and Ergoaprol, both of which were of American origin. Ephreux, however, did have the word "Poison" at the bottom of the package.

The substances, continued counsel, are in very extensive demand, and he asked that an extremely lenient view be taken, owing to the fact that they were the first batch of cases taken. It was the outcome of the policy of the Government to stop the sale of these drugs, which might not injure a proportion of people, but might be injurious to a certain class of the population.

Since the summonses had been taken out, defendant had managed to get the service of a suitable chemist, who is licensed. Counsel hoped his Worship appreciated the fact that it was only of recent date that the substances had been condemned as poison, and had been sold for years without any action being taken.

GOVERNMENT AIM

Mr. Abbott, in reply, said he agreed with Mr. McCallum that the cases were the first group to be brought under the Ordinance, but he wished to correct one thing said.

Mr. McCallum had said that it was the policy of the Government to stop the sale of these articles, but he thought that what Mr. McCallum had meant to say was that it was the policy of the Government to stop the sale of these drugs by unauthorised persons.

It was a rather serious offence not to label the poisons in either English or Chinese, but Mr. Abbott said he did not wish to suggest that that should be taken in weighing the penalty against the defendant. It arose through the ignorance of the parties concerned, but as ignorance or lack of knowledge had gone so far as to become carelessness that had persisted over a period of years. Counsel was not asking for a heavy penalty in the

MOROCCO: TROUBLE CENTRE

The scare created by reports of German infiltration in Morocco has, happily, died down following mutual assurances by both Germany and France that they intend fully to respect the territorial integrity of Spain and Spanish possessions. Morocco has often figured in the news as a danger-spot, having been for many years the centre of conflicting national interests. Because of its proximity to Algeria, France has always taken a lively concern in its future. Not many years before the Great War, France and Germany almost came to a clash when, following a general rising of tribesmen, a French expeditionary force occupied Fez. The need for this action was notified to the Powers, but was resented by Spain, who suddenly seized two towns, and by Germany, who sent the gunboat Panther to Agadir and thereby almost brought on a European war. Great Britain made formal objection to Germany's acquiring territorial influence in Morocco, and the diplomatic conversations which followed resulted in the Franco-German Treaty of 1911, by which France ceded to Germany some territory in French equatorial Africa, the Cameroons, in return for recognition of her political Protectorate over Morocco. In the following year, negotiations between France and Spain as to their respective rights in Morocco came to an end with the Treaty of Madrid. By this pact, France acknowledged the right of Spain to exercise its influence in the Spanish zone, the extent of which was defined in the treaty. The Tangier district was excluded from the Spanish zone, and in 1923 a convention was signed by Great Britain, France and Spain guaranteeing the permanent security and internationalisation of this special Tangier zone. Three years later, however, Spain reopened the question by a demand for full control and incorporation of Tangier in Spanish Morocco. Great Britain and France withheld their comment, while Italy declared her

Now that our former King has become the Duke of Windsor, everyone must wonder exactly what is his position to-day in our Constitution.

It is a situation without precedent in the history of our land. Much one can say with certitude; but there still remain details in regard to such matters as precedence about which no legal expert would commit himself without extensive research.

In this, admittedly a rather hurried survey, we can at least give some indication of what are the rights and privileges of the new Duke of Windsor and how he now stands in relation to the Constitution.

Still A Prince

THERE is slight confusion, apparently, in the minds of some people as to the status of the new dukedom.

Let it be made clear that the former King is still Prince Edward. He does not take the place of the Duke of Norfolk as premier duke. He will be the eldest of the royal Dukes, apart from the Duke of Connaught, and will, it is assumed, take precedence after the Heir presumptive.

In English history there has not been a voluntary abdication before—with the possible exception of James II. Other English Kings who have left the Throne have been forced into their abdications, some of them rather painfully.

As Prince Edward has renounced the Throne and has also undertaken that his descendants shall not be in the line of succession, it might be argued that his precedence will stand below that of any member of the Royal Family in the line of succession.

Royal Highness

ONE of the most important points which must necessarily be occupying the public mind is what will be the title taken by his wife in the event of marriage.

The future wife of his Royal Highness the Duke of Windsor will obviously be known as her Royal Highness the Duchess of Windsor. She will be entitled to the precedence and privileges of her husband's rank.

In regard to the presence of interest in the matter as a Mediterranean Power. Italy's right to intervene in questions affecting the balance of power in the Mediterranean was then recognised. A new accord became effective in 1929, in which Spain was given control of policing Tangier. It will be realised, from this summary of international concern in Morocco, that the territory is one where rival interests might easily clash. Fortunately, there seems every indication at present that the nations generally, as well as the Spanish insurgents, fully realise the grave situation which would be created by the admission of foreign contingents into the territory.

The Privileges and Precedence of

The New Duke of Windsor

By An Expert
LAW OF PRECEDENCE

the Duke of Windsor in the Without Precedent House of Lords, this must be recognised.

He will be created a duke, presumably by Letters Patent, issued either in the Court Circular or the London Gazette or in both. It will not be necessary for him to return to receive the dukedom. But to sit in the House of Lords he must receive a summons—a personal summons—and to that he is entitled as a peer.

This was established by the case of the Earl of Bristol in the reign of James I. For certain reasons the Crown wished to exclude him from the House of Lords, but his right to receive a summons was affirmed.

It is certain that as the Duke of Windsor the former King is entitled to the writ of summons.

Of course, it is not obligatory for a peer to respond to the summons, but should the Duke decide to answer, as would an ordinary peer, there would then arise the extraordinary situation—one probably without precedent in the whole of world history—of a former King taking his seat in the House of Lords and taking the oath of allegiance to his successor.

Whether this position will ever arise one cannot say, but nevertheless it is a course which Prince Edward would be clearly entitled to take.

The writ of summons would be issued by the Lord Chancellor. The issue of writs to call peers to the House is a practice which began in the 13th century.

One must distinguish between the Duke's position as a Prince of the blood and his position as a peer. He has absolutely renounced the Crown for himself and his descendants, but he cannot, of course, renounce the blood in his veins. A Prince of the blood he must remain, though legally barred from the succession.

The Duchy

A PECULIAR position—again one without precedent—is to be found in regard to the ownership of the Duchy of Cornwall.

The Duchy of Lancaster is indisputably the appanage of the Crown; but the Duchy of Cornwall has always been regarded as the possession of the eldest son of the King.

The former King became possessor of the Duchy of Cornwall 25 years before he succeeded to the Throne; and it is not improbable that some special legislation will be required to settle the point.

When Travelling

IN the event of Prince Edward's marriage, and should there be any children, there may be some question concerning their titles, but these would normally be those of the sons and daughters of a duke.

In his travels abroad, whether our late King should go, he will presumably be treated, as are his brothers, with the diplomatic immunity accorded to royal Princes.

HONGKONG AND THE TREATY OF WASHINGTON

By
A SUNDAY TIMES STAFF REPORTER

Darwin

ONE interesting development may result, however, from Britain's new strategy in the Far East.

The Sunday Times understands the advisability of using Darwin as a summer base for Britain's China Squadron instead of Wei-Hai-Wei, will be discussed at the Imperial Conference which is to be held during the Coronation.

British naval experts have come to the conclusion that Wei-Hai-Wei, which is north of Shanghai, could not be defended in event of hostilities with a neighbouring Power.

The China Squadron could be bottled up rapidly by hostile warships and aircraft, and virtually destroyed before it was able to escape to Hongkong or Singapore.

On the other hand, Darwin is much more suitable to the Navy's strategic requirements.

It could not easily be taken by surprise. It is outside any Power's practicable operating range.

Close Link

MOREOVER, the establishment of a base at Darwin would provide a welcome opportunity for combined manoeuvres of the China, India, and Australian squadrons, and would be closely linked to Singapore.

The China Squadron, more than 20 units of which will visit Singapore this month, includes the aircraft carrier Hermes, several county class cruisers, destroyers and submarine flotillas, and minelayers.

The Squadron, based on Darwin, could dock and rest at Singapore.

The Royal Navy already regards Darwin as Singapore's auxiliary base, forming a strong triangle with Trincomalee (Ceylon), and preventing access by an Asiatic fleet to the Indian Ocean.

Discussion of the transferred of the base of the China Squadron from Wei-Hai-Wei to Darwin will probably be hastened by the conclusion of the Japanese-German pact.

Australian naval authorities, The Sunday Times, understand, are favourable to the idea, although they would naturally prefer to see the establishment of a naval base on the east coast of Australia, which would be a stronger safeguard to the Commonwealth.

Advance Base

REFORTIFICATION on such a scale was not anticipated in Japan, where it was believed that Britain had decided to withdraw her first line of defences to Singapore.

Britain considers, however, that Singapore is not a sufficient guard against Japan. Hongkong is not close enough for attack on Japan, and it is already accepted that Japan is unpredictable, so far as sea attack is concerned, behind her own natural defences.

Japan has concealed her military activities in Formosa by making every strategic centre a "prohibited

The Man Who Should Go On Our Next Cricket Tour

FIRST CLASS TRAINER IS DESIRABLE

(By Bruce Harris)

Sydney. The late Herbert Chapman, builder of the Arsenal's fame in football, once told me, with his entertaining emphasis, that "if I could take my trainer with the party I could win the Ashes in Australia with a second-class side."

An exaggeration no doubt—he did exaggerate—but I believe with more than a tinge of truth in it. Some day or other the M.C.C. may send their sides out here under a trainer; the result inevitably will be seen in greater cricket efficiency.

Trainers have come into their own in boxing, in football, lately in lawn tennis—our Davis Cup side after years of indifference had its trainer last season. They ought, I suggest, to be part and parcel of the equipment of every cricket side which goes overseas after the "Ashes." Trainers, I mean, of high skill in massage and treatment of minor injuries, as well as work on the running track and in the gymnasium.

Do not misunderstand me. I am not implying that the 17 men of whom I see so much in Australia are living slack lives, staying up late o' nights and overdrinking. They are not. They are voluntarily an abstemious crowd; not in the main strict teetotallers, but reasonably careful.

WOULD GO STALE

For five months of more or less continuous cricket, I agree, men cannot be trained in the same way as for a football match once a week. They would go hopelessly stale.

Granted all that, there must be a certain physical pitch to which cricketers like all other athletes are best trained. Rule-of-thumb methods are as out of place in this game as in any other. Science must displace rule of thumb for maximum results.

Out here it is the practice at every town to have a local missus in the dressing-rooms. Think of the extra convenience and efficiency of having one, equipped with electrical appliances, daily accessible, in the hotels with the men; an expert able to "cool up" sprains and bruises and remove them with maximum speed; an expert knowing the make-up physically of every man of the side.

There must be for every cricketer, as much as for a boxer or footballer, a correct "fighting weight." If he enters the field accordingly, it is a reasonable assumption that he is better able to bat, bowl or field, less liable to strains such as have handicapped our side this tour. Ought not fast bowlers especially to be trained to the ounce with due regard, of course, to the fact that their effort spreads—stretches—over months rather than days?

"SCRAPPERS"

In Australia it is the "scappers" as much as the cricketers who win matches—the man fired with never-say-die, who will bowl or field till he drops. The Jardine side of 1922-3 had indeed a high proportion of the best sort of scrappers, largely Northerners. They won the "Ashes." The present good side may do so despite early disappointments. But I am convinced that their chances are as good as ours.

Secret recipes do not exist...

Mild, aromatic, stimulating, refreshing. Yes, there are "cocktails" and "Cocktails". Nevertheless they're practically made everywhere to the same recipes. The difference lies less in the mixing than in the gin. Just try a bottle of Silver Top Dry Gin and mix a Martini! SCHMELING VERSUS BRADDOCK

FIGHT MAY BE STAGED IN BERLIN

New York, Dec. 17. A group of wealthy Europeans has started negotiations to transfer the Jimmy Braddock-Max Schmeling heavyweight title fight next June from New York to Berlin, it was learned to-day.

Dennis Scanlon, an international business man with headquarters in London and New York, has conferred with Madison Square Garden, co-promoter of the bout with the Club. He said John Reed Kilpatrick, Garden President, is "interested in the proposition if certain conditions can be met."

Although he has not conferred with Mike Jacobs, 20th Century Fox probably will be entered for the international tournament, though no word has yet been received from these groups. England should have a strong team as players of the calibre of Spagnoletti, Stokes and Wade are available. Leong Hong-teck and Kang Boon-sang, members of St. John's team, should form a strong combination and likely to be China's entries.

According to Scanlon, the Garden and others connected with the fight fear that anti-Nazi sentiment in New York will cause a small gate if held at the Garden Bowl on Long Island and because they know the set-up is ideal for a huge gate in Berlin.

Scanlon said a group of friends in Europe with unlimited backing, after investigating the possibility of a Berlin fight in July, "concluded it would attract a gate of more than $1,750,000. They found that Berlin's Olympic stadium could seat close to 200,000 persons for a fight."

Never before have circumstances offered such an ideal situation for a big European fight. The challenger, Schmeling, is Germany's athletic idol. He is a close friend of Hitler, Hitler and his associates desire this fight," Scanlon said.

Scanlon said the bout appeared so attractive financially that his group empowered him to offer the American promoters $500,000 to buy the fight outright and let them promote it, including paying the participants.

Jacobs said he was not interested in a fight.

"I can tell you right now that there'll be no title fight outside the United States. I own half that show and I won't permit it. It would be a slap in the face of our own boxing commission," Jacobs said.

Braddock's manager, Joe Gould, admitted Scanlon had sounded him out and, "I told Scanlon that Bradock didn't care where he fought just so that he got his money out of it." —United Press.

Badminton Tournament Supported

FIVE ENTRIES IN SHANGHAI EVENT

Entries for the International Badminton tournament, sponsored by the Shanghai Badminton Association, are closing.

To date, five teams have entered for this tournament. Entries have been received from a Norwegian team, represented by Berents and Gutz, B. V. de Senna and da Silva, and Portuguese colours while Wilson and Forbes will play for Scotland. A team representing France has also been received, Meise and Mary or Chailian having been elected to play for that unit. The Chileans brothers will represent Chile.

Kane's speed and superior skill eclipsed all but the splendid courage and pugnacity of the Belgian.

Vandenbos never endeavoured to evade any of the pitiless punishment to which he was subjected. In fact, he rushed to meet it and even Kane seemed to be surprised to find his little rival coming up again and again for the fray.

Kane exploited all the punches.

The first to his home was a smashing right to the stomach but, his two-handed hammering to the head, with the straight left never missing its target, had the Belgian dizzy and stumbling early on.

WIN FOR McCLEAVE

Towards the end of the fifth round a crashing right put Vandenbos in a kneeling position on the floor. It seemed all over, but at the count of eight he rose quickly, and the bell went before Kane could continue the slaughter. Then came the start of the sixth round, and 23 seconds later Vandenbos was staggering half silly under a hall of blows when the bout was stopped, and wisely so.

Dave McCleave, the ex-welter-weight champion, made his debut last night at middle-weight against Bob Simpkins, of Bridlington. At 1st. 10. McCleave looked bigger and in fine fettle. In the second round he floored Simpkins for eight with a right to the jaw, but afterwards he seemed content to just score his points, chiefly with the left hand. In the seventh round the referee stopped the bout with Simpkins again on the floor. McCleave had made good in his new role.

Should Canada and the U.S.A. enter, their teams will most likely be Squires and Carson, representing America and Duff and Sullivan, Canada. Australian team will probably be Kew and Bardley.

Scanlon said a group of friends in Europe with unlimited backing, after investigating the possibility of a Berlin fight in July, "concluded it would attract a gate of more than $1,750,000. They found that Berlin's Olympic stadium could seat close to 200,000 persons for a fight."

Never before have circumstances offered such an ideal situation for a big European fight. The challenger, Schmeling, is Germany's athletic idol. He is a close friend of Hitler, Hitler and his associates desire this fight," Scanlon said.

Scanlon said the bout appeared so attractive financially that his group empowered him to offer the American promoters $500,000 to buy the fight outright and let them promote it, including paying the participants.

Jacobs said he was not interested in a fight.

"I can tell you right now that there'll be no title fight outside the United States. I own half that show and I won't permit it. It would be a slap in the face of our own boxing commission," Jacobs said.

OVERCROWDED GROUNDMelbourne Cricket Club Severely Criticised

Melbourne, Jan. 12. The Health Commission scathingly criticises the crowding of the ground for the Test Match on January 4, and says that only luck prevented loss of life, when the crowd rushed the unfinished section of concrete, which was still unset. The crushing against the locked gates after the end of play might have resulted in deaths.

The aisles and gangways were overcrowded and the situation most dangerous in the event of a panic.

The Commission has directed the Melbourne Club to revise the estimated capacity and prevent any further entry after the capacity limit has been reached.

The Melbourne Cricket Club has announced that new regulations will be enforced for the clearance of the stand gangways in future Test Matches, although this will restrict attendances.—Reuter.

Intelligence Tests for Children

DO not expect your child to be able to do all the tests in the following age groups.

But he should be able to score in at least one of the tests if they are presented in familiar surroundings by a person in whom the child has complete confidence.

Simple for a Start

AGE 3.—Test 1: Show the child a sheet of plain paper, measuring about 4 inches by 5 inches. Tell him to watch you making a book out of it. Then fold the paper double and press it down. Open and close the paper several times, pointing out that it looks like a little book. Then hand the child a similar piece of paper and ask him to make you a book.

SCORING. If the child folds the paper one or more times so that it leaves a clean crease, the response is a success. It does not matter if the fold is irregular or even diagonal.

Test 2: Ask the child to indicate with a finger parts of his face—such as nose, eyes, ears, mouth, hair. Use your normal method of speech in doing this.

SCORING. Three responses out of four must be correct for the child to pass the test successfully. If the picture spontaneously

Test for Handiness

AGE 4.—Test 1: On an ordinary postcard, rule two parallel lines about one inch apart. Make one line half an inch longer than the other.

Then give the card to the child and ask him to point to the longer line. You may use the superlative "longest" if you like, as it will probably be more familiar to the child.

Then withdraw the card and present it from another angle. Do this once again so that the child has seen the lines in three different positions.

SCORING. All three comparisons must be made correctly, or you cannot consider the child successful.

Test 3: Find a large coloured picture (from a book or magazine) with plenty of objects and life in it. Praise the picture and give it to the child so that he can see it completely and clearly.

Then ask him to tell you what he sees in the picture. If there is no immediate response you may help the child by saying "Show me the..." indicating some specific object. That should be sufficient to start the child's replies.

SCORING. The test is passed if the child names three objects in one pass the test successfully. If the picture spontaneously child wrinkles, screws up his nose, opens his mouth instead of actually pointing at the features mentioned you can consider it quite satisfactory.

Test 4: Put four pennies (or other coins) in a row in front of the child and ask him to count them aloud as he touches each one. You may point to the first on the child's left and say "Like this, 'One'."

SCORING. The child has passed the test if his counting tallies with his pointing. He has failed if he just mentions the right number of the coins.

Test 5: On a postcard draw a star thus leaving room for the child to copy it. He can use pencil, pen or crayon.

SCORING. Any attempt in which the main characteristics of a star are present is a success. The number of the arms does not matter, but they must cross in the centre and give the effect of radiating out.

Test 2: Put four pennies (or other coins) in a row in front of the child and ask him to count them aloud as he touches each one. You may point to the first on the child's left and say "Like this, 'One'."

SCORING. Any attempt in which the main characteristics of a star are present is a success. The number of the arms does not matter, but they must cross in the centre and give the effect of radiating out.

Length of Lines

AGE 5.—Test 1: Drive two ordinary 3/4-in. screws into a solid piece of wood. Show the child how to take out one with a screw-driver. Then hand him the driver and ask him to remove the other screw.

SCORING. This is reckoned by the time it takes the child to get the screw right out. One minute is exceptionally good time for five-year-olds. Three minutes is an average time.

Run the hoe through beds of wallflowers, and press firm any plants which have become loose, and would only be made looser by the wind.

Clear away all fallen leaves which may have collected on the wallflowers, and which might be a cause of decay.

Remove all dead or weakly plants, and replace them with others from the seedbed. G.I.B.B.

Test 2: Paint or crayon four patches of colour—red, yellow, blue, green (four similar objects in these colours or squares cut from different book-jackets will serve as well).

Put the colours in a row in front of the child and say "What is the name of this colour?" to each in turn. If you are using objects, explain first that you are only interested in the colours, not in the shape of the objects.

SCORING. The test is passed if all the colours are named correctly the first time. This test is not based on a colour sense, as all five-year-olds who have ordinary sight should be able to discriminate between these colours and will already have associated them in the mind with the right name by observation of adults.

Then withdraw the card and present it from another angle. Do this once again so that the child has seen the lines in three different positions.

SCORING. All three comparisons must be made correctly, or you cannot consider the child successful.

Do not alter the position of the orders in the repetition and leave the child alone with his task if necessary. Such orders as "Bring me that vase (pointing at it), then put this pencil on the table" and then open the door."

SCORING. All three commissions should be carried out in the right order. This test is a useful one to try out on a child who is just starting school. If he passes it well he will take quickly and easily to orthodox school learning.

Test 3:—On a postcard draw a star thus leaving room for the child to copy it. He can use pencil, pen or crayon.

SCORING. Any attempt in which the main characteristics of a star are present is a success. The number of the arms does not matter, but they must cross in the centre and give the effect of radiating out.

It would be far better if the calendar-mongers specialized, not in wisdom, but in folly. Folly is a commodity of which there is a far more inexhaustible and far more rapidly growing supply than there is of wisdom. Scarcely a day passes—one certainly has passed for more than a week—on which there is not made public some statement of an import so colossal as to merit immortality in one form or another. Calendar magnates should make it their business to collate the more memorable pages and incorporate them in their wares.

The result would greatly fortify the self-respect of our aunts, whose opinion of their own intelligence and good taste would be enhanced by reminders that the eminent are frequently deficient in both.

CALLING ALL CALENDARS

The calendar season has just begun in full swing. We have all bought calendars to give to our aunts, and our aunts have bought calendars to give to us.

There are few signs of originality in this year's crop, which is as it should be. The perfunctory, the almost mechanical, nature of our reciprocal generosity would be ill served by the introduction of a disconcerting element of novelty.

It is, moreover, extremely difficult to be original with a calendar. Such experiments with title as have been made in the past have not been popular. Interference with the established order of the months has, it is true, often passed unnoticed in a country where there is too seldom climatic evidence available for those pedants who wish to discover whether they are living in January or June; but any tampering with the usual sequence of days is strongly resented.

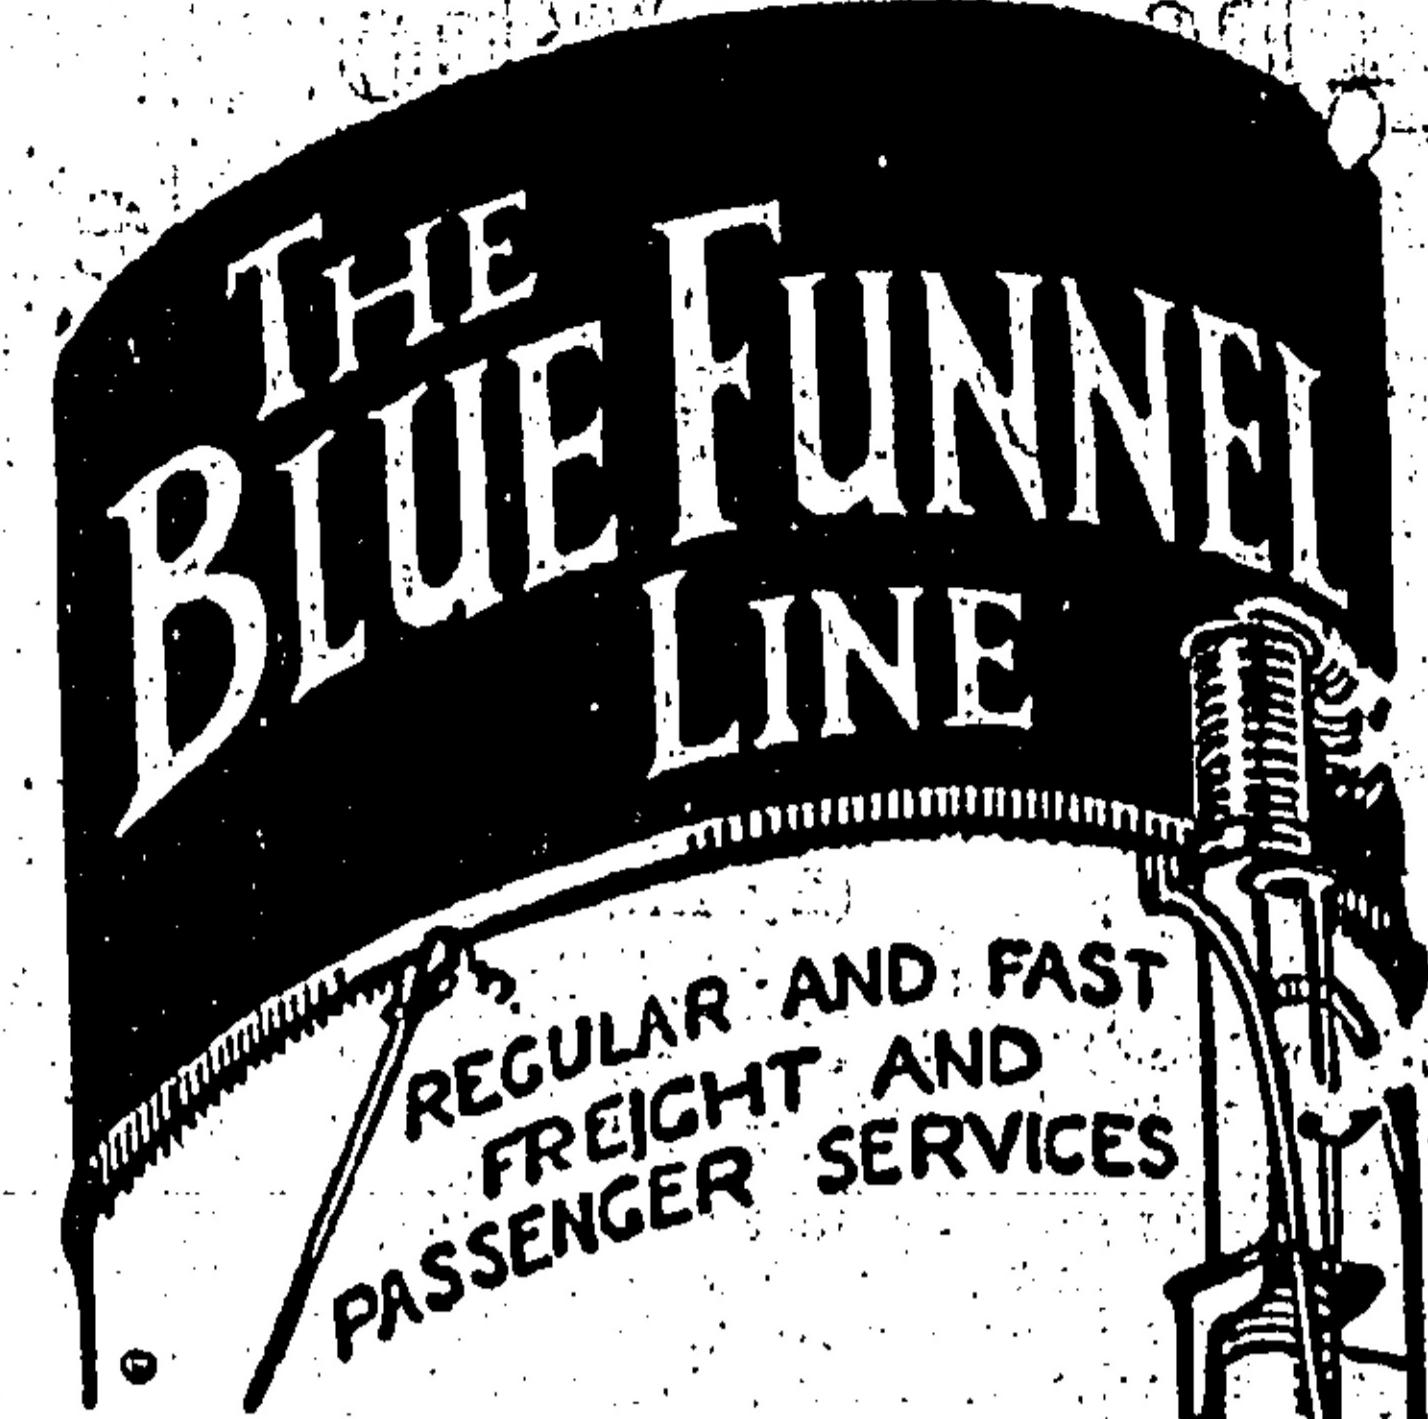

The moral of many an aunt has been seriously impaired by the receipt of a calendar which led off with a month of Sundays, and the vaguest and most unobservant of women becomes the prey of painful suspicions when she finds herself dating her correspondence "March 40th." The firms responsible for these frivolous innovations are now for the most part out of business.

There is however one feature of the calendar market where reform might well prove salutary. The "Thought for To-day" system needs gilding up. In theory, no doubt, it is a good thing to be confronted every morning with some fresh aphorism, epigram, or profundity. But in practice the confronter comes, after a time, to dislike these, snug, Olympian intimations. Besides, the world's quotable stock of wisdom is preponderantly of a negative kind.

It consists very largely of warnings. "October 1st" (Pheasant shooting begins). Trust few men. "Above all keep your follies to yourself." Sir Walter Raleigh—"there is a note of asperity here which is unacceptable even to the mildest of aunts; yet the advice is too sensible to ignore, and the new vicar, calling to pay his respects, is treated with friendly suspicion. Thoreau may have said "Make the most of your regrets." To "regret deeply is to live afresh," and Dryden that "No Government has ever been, or ever can be, wherein time-servers and blockheads will not be uppermost"; but there is no reason why we—and far less why our aunts—should be reminded of their unexhilarating words.

It would be far better if the calendar-mongers specialized, not in wisdom, but in folly. Folly is a commodity of which there is a far more inexhaustible and far more rapidly growing supply than there is of wisdom. Scarcely a day passes—one certainly has passed for more than a week—on which there is not made public some statement of an import so colossal as to merit immortality in one form or another. Calendar magnates should make it their business to collate the more memorable pages and incorporate them in their wares.

The result would greatly fortify the self-respect of our aunts, whose opinion of their own intelligence and good taste would be enhanced by reminders that the eminent are frequently deficient in both.

WEATHER EXPERTS CONFER BIG GATHERING IN HONGKONG OPENED BY GOVERNOR

Representatives from many parts of the world and from air lines and navies met in the Council Chamber today to begin a week's deliberation on the Regional Commission 11 of the International Meteorological Organisation. His Excellency the Governor, Sir Andrew Caldecott, was introduced to the visitors by Mr. C. W. Jeffries, Director of the Royal Observatory, Hongkong, and H.E. then addressed the meeting and declared the Conference open. The Chairman, Mons. E. Bruzon, replied.

Following the introductions H.E. the Governor said: "Much as I sympathise with your President that it has been found inconvenient for you to forget at his headquarters in Hanoi, I must confess to a sense of gratification that as a substituted venue he should have selected Hongkong, whereby the high honour and privilege of concluding open the first Conference of the Regional Meteorological Commission for the Far East has fallen on me. Gentlemen, on behalf of the Government and people of this Colony I bid you a very warm welcome, in the sincere hope that your deliberations here will facilitate the co-ordination of methods desired by the International Meteorological Organisation, and that such co-operation may lead to a solution, if only a partial one, of the problem of the movement of air masses over this portion of the earth, and thus aid the solution of the general atmospheric problem."

"Mon. Bruzon, I congratulate you upon the representative nature of the gathering here assembled, and also upon the presence of Lt. Col. Gold, Assistant Director of the Meteorological Office, London, who, as the President of the Commission for Synoptic Meteorology, will, I am sure, be of the greatest assistance to you."

"Gentlemen, may I repeat to you a most hearty welcome to Hongkong and trust that your stay here may be not only profitable to the science of meteorology but also pleasurable to yourselves."

MEET OF CO-OPERATION

Mr. Bruzon's reply in part was as follows:—"As President of this Commission, I am very much indebted to Your Excellency for permitting us to hold our conference in Hongkong, the permission has been greatly appreciated by all us. As Your Excellency stated, Hanoi was first to be the seat of our meeting and I had already taken the necessary steps when it appeared that Hongkong would suit the majority of delegates much better. The question was a delicate one, but thanks to the kindness of Your Excellency it was soon resolved. I am most grateful to you, sir, for the assistance you have afforded me."

"In meteorology, close international co-operation, implying uniformity of methods, has become a necessity. The need for such co-operation was already felt in 1930 when the Eastern meteorologists met in this very place. It was then easy to predict that the quick development of aviation would soon lay all weather services under an obligation to make a heavy contribution."

"The institution of regional commissions is the logical consequence of the increasing needs of aviation and I sincerely hope that the Regional Commission 11 which meets to-day for the first time will carry out useful work on behalf of the International organisation. I and the delegates of this commission thank Your Excellency for the honour you have conferred upon us by consenting to open it."

WEEK'S PARLEY

It is expected that the deliberations of the Commission, which are being carried on in both French and English, will occupy about six or seven days. During that time numerous items will be discussed, most of them concerned with the unification of reports by meteorological stations, the more complete reporting of conditions over sea areas, better and more frequent messages to airplanes, hours of observations, new stations and adoption of a standard code.

Among those present when the Conference commenced were:—M. Bruzon, President, Director of the Central Observatory, Phuilen, Indo-China; Colonel E. Gold, p.s.o., of the London Meteorological Office; Father M. Selga, Director of the Manila Observatory; C. D. Stewart, Superintendent of the Singapore Observatory; E. W. Timcke, Australian Representative; Father E. Gherzi, from Shanghai; Professor J. Boermia, from Batavia; Dr. Jameson, from Colombo; Dr. Coching Chin, of the National Research Laboratory of Meteorology, Nanking; Rev. P. Lejny, Shanghai; Dr. C. W. B.
